AWAIT EATON GRAND JURY REPORT TODAY

The Plymouth County Grand Jury, sitting for the fourth day in the Eaton death mystery, convened at 10:20. The jury is expected to return a finding before it adjourns for the day. It is believed that the Grand Jury has only to hear two other witnesses and possibly only one.

State Officer Scott of Braintree resumed his story of the investigation where he left off at adjournment yesterday.

The possibility of Mrs. George Harrison, Mrs. Eaton's mother, going to Plymouth to testify is thought to be very remote. She is the only person connected with the case who has not yet testified.

Dorothy Eaton and Jane Keyes will not be present in Plymouth when the Grand Jury reports its finding on the guilt or innocence of their mother today. Instead, they will wait at the Assinippi home for the earliest news from Plymouth.

It was learned today that both have drawn all railroad and witness fees and are owed nothing by the county. Had they been summoned again for today they would not have received their fare home.

Plymouth county pays witnesses railroad fare at the rate of 5 cents a mile. This is paid by the week. They were allowed $6.25 each, which includes three days' witness fees at $1.25 a day and fifty-two miles railroad fare at 5 cents a mile, amounting to $2.60.

District Attorney Barker has arranged to notify Mrs. Eaton's counsel, former Senator W. A. Morse, should the jury return an indictment against Mrs. Eaton for murder in the first degree.

This would mean the immediate arraignment of Mrs. Eaton before Judge Dubuque, but court officials hardly expect an arraignment today.

District Attorney Barker denies the possibility of a second arrest or of a double indictment.

Mrs. Eaton, after a good night's sleep in the Plymouth jail, ate a hearty breakfast. She received a letter from Judge George W. Kelley of Rockland asking to make an inventory of Admiral Eaton's estate.

Mrs. Eaton called for pen and paper and began immediately after breakfast making mental inventory of her husband's household effects. She expected to devote most of the day to this work, as she will probably not receive any visits from her daughters Jane or Dorithy today.

Judge Kelley's letter to Mrs. Eaton is taken to mean that he intends to take speedy action to relieve the financial situation of the Eaton family.

Ashmont Fireman Weds Girl He Saved in Burning House

Miss Lillian Burns of No. 1882 Dorchester avenue who, with her mother and sisters was saved from death in a fire last April, is today the bride of her rescuer, Hoseman Joseph M. May of Engine 46, Ashmont.

They were married Tuesday evening, and had agreed to keep their wedding secret. May looked so happy that his comrades guessed him for the reason of his smile. He decided to tell them.

It was 3 o'clock of a morning last April that Hoseman May climbed up a ladder and groped his way through blinding smoke into the Burns' apartments hearing her and her sisters, Mae and Zita, together with their mother, to a place of safety.

PROTEST CHURCH FOR TOWN ELECTION

LEOMINSTER, March 27.—Members of the Methodist church do not care to have cigar stubs left in the church vestry as souvenirs, according to Charles W. McKay. Mr. McKay is opposing the use of the church for the special election April 5, to name a building committee for a new town hall. The church has been used for town and State elections since the town hall burned.

FLOWERS ON GRAVE OF UNKNOWN BABE

MILLBURY, March 27.—The police are trying to find out who placed a handsome bouquet of flowers on the grave of an unknown child, whose body was found in the Blackstone River. When discovered it was in such a condition that the medical examiner could not determine whether the infant was born dead or alive. It was buried in the poor section of Central Cemetery. The finding of a floral tribute on the freshly-spaded earth followed.

SPRINGFIELD TO HELP REFUGEES

SPRINGFIELD, March 27.—Mayor Denison has offered the organized aid of this city in behalf of the flood sufferers to Governor James M. Cox of Ohio. A mass meeting has been called for tonight to decide on ways to raise money.

Governor Cox's own story of the flood disaster and the situation in Ohio, telegraphed to the Boston AMERICAN, will be found on Page 5.

FEAR BISHOP LAWRENCE IN FLOOD ZONE

Fear is felt in Boston lest Bishop William Lawrence, head of the Episcopal Church of Massachusetts, is caught in the floods in the Ohio valley. He went to Columbus, O., five days ago to consecrate Rev. Theodore I. Reese as suffragan bishop of Ohio. Boston friends have not heard from him since, though he was due back in Boston today to officiate at the funeral in St. Paul's Church of Rev. Thomas A. Jaggar.

TWO OF MORGAN'S PARTNERS TO SAIL TO SEE MAGNATE

NEW YORK, March 27.—Two members of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., are about to sail for Europe, where they will meet Mr. Morgan.

H. P. Davison, the active head of the banking house, is to leave Tuesday; W. P. Hamilton will sail Saturday.

The official information is that both partners are to have a vacation, following their exhaustive activities in connection with the Pujo committee's investigation, but it is rumored in financial circles that they may have important business to transact with Mr. Morgan.

Disquieting reports are again current concerning the condition of the aged banker's health—he is now near the end of his seventy-sixth year.

The mental strain which Mr. Morgan underwent last Winter is believed to have told heavily upon him.

TURKS DESTROY ALBANIAN TOWN

VIENNA, March 27.—A wireless message received here today stated that the Turkish cruiser Hamidieh had bombarded and destroyed the Albanian port of San Giovanni di Medua on the Adriatic Sea. This port was captured by Servians some time ago and has been occupied by them since.

ASK PENNSYLVANIA AID FOR SUFFERERS

HARRISBURG, Pa., March 27.—Governor Tener early today issued a proclamation asking that the people of Pennsylvania extend aid to the Ohio flood sufferers.

DYNAMITE BUILDINGS TO SAVE THOUSANDS

BULLETINS.

COLUMBUS, O., MARCH 27 (11 A. M.)—VICE-MAYOR HUBEBR OF DAYTON TODAY SENT OUT APPEALS TO ALL THE CITIES OF THE STATE FOR DYNAMITE TO USE IN BLOWING UP BUILDINGS IN THE PATH OF THE FLAMES. THE FIRE MUST BE CHECKED AT ONCE TO SAVE THE LIVES OF HUNDREDS, WHOSE HAVENS OF REFUGE ARE THREATENED WITH DESTRUCTION BY FIRE.

DAYTON, O., March 27.—10 A. M.—The conflagration is still raging and appears to be beyond control. The Lewiston reservoir threatens to go out at any minute and destroy the remaining parts of the city, with big loss of life.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Three thousand five hundred dead, more than 350,000 homeless, fire threatening 65,000 men and women penned in the business district of Dayton, children crying for food, a property loss of $100,000,000, and little relief in sight, summarizes the situation in the deluge stricken districts of Ohio and Indiana.

COLUMBUS, O., March 27.—Agencies of relief in flood-torn and prostrate Ohio began to make headway today with the arrival of a fresh army of workers and new appliances in the inundated district.

Thousands of refugees who were marooned and whose lives were imperilled were carried to points of safety.

The fate of Dayton has become more perilous with the weakening of the Lewiston reservoir. If it should let go the remaining parts of the city would be swept away, with tremendous loss of life.

These were the conditions, so far as shattered communication allowed the facts to be gathered, up to 8 A. M.

The dead in Ohio are estimated at 3,500, although these figures were compiled while vast areas were cut off and cities were isolated.

The dead in Dayton are estimated at from 1,000 to 2,000, although

MRS. EATON INDICTED FOR MURDER OF HER HUSBAND

An indictment charging Mrs. Jannie May Eaton with murder in poisoning her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, of Assinippi, was reported to Judge Dubuque at Plymouth today by the Plymouth rGand Jury, which has been holding a special session on the case since Monday.

AMERICAN OPENS BUREAUS TO HELP FLOOD SUFFERERS

The Boston AMERICAN is opening Relief Bureaus here and in Dayton and the stricken area.

Every person in Boston willing to contribute relief of any kind—food, medicine, clothing, shoes or other useful articles, is invited to prepare all such donations for delivery.

In this respect the AMERICAN places itself at the disposal of the public officials of the stricken district and the merchants of Boston.

As quickly as supplies are contributed they will be rushed to the Field Branches of The Relief Bureau and dispensed among the needy. The AMERICAN asks only new articles of wearing apparel because of the great difficulties attendant upon the handling of old clothing.

SEE PROWLER ABOUT ESTATE OF BRANDEGEES

For the past two days a mysterious stranger has been seen loitering in Clyde street, Brookline, a short distance away from the home of Mrs. Edward D. Brandegee, who is under the care of a physician as the result of four Black Hand letters sent to her threatening her life and the destruction of her home unless she gave $5,000.

From the meagre description obtained of the man who escaped from Sergeant Rutherford and Lieutenant Stitt of the Brookline police after he had been trapped in an alleyway off Washington street, this man is thought to be the same.

The man was first noticed by an employee of the Brookline Country Club. He was seen in the morning and again in the afternoon, both times in the same place. Yesterday, while the employee was busy on the grounds, the stranger passed the club, walked down Clyde street and disappeared around the corner.

He was a man about thirty years old and weighed 140 pounds. He wore a dark overcoat, dark trousers and a black derby. He was smooth-faced. A mounted officer had been detailed to ride through the district of which the Brandegee estate is a part.

It became known today that the postal authorities may take a hand in running down the sender of these letters. Chief Inspector Letherman of the postal service has become interested in the case. Although none of the letters has been received by him, he told an AMERICAN reporter he would be glad to see them.

There are several men in the department who make a specialty of running down blackmailers. Often these are old offenders and samples of handwriting of all of these cases which have been investigated by the department are kept on file. They have a sample Bertillon system. Some of these have been taken from the envelopes, while others are made after arrests.

WOMAN PAYS $100 AS LIQUOR FINE

Mrs. Ellen Callahan was today found guilty in the Charlestown District Court of maintaining a liquor nuisance at her home, No. 7 Tufts street, Charlestown. Judge Bragg imposed a fine of $100 which was paid forthwith by Mrs. Callahan from a large roll. The Charlestown police last Sunday raided the house, and in the cellar, beneath a pile of firewood, discovered three wells dug in the floor, containing whiskey, beer and ale.

Meeting of Revere Selectmen Ends In Violent Row

Another wrangle, which almost ended in a free fight, featured the meeting of the Revere Selectmen. After Selectmen Fartell, Hubbard and Vincent had voted down an order to appoint ten special police Selectman Bruno Hartung—who had introduced the order—charged his colleagues with playing "petty and dirty" politics. Officials and 300 spectators sprang to their feet and a free fight threatened. The meeting adjourned a few moments later amid disorder and brandishing of fists.

MANY CLERGYMEN ATTEND FUNERAL OF BISHOP JAGGAR

The funeral of Bishop Thomas A. Jaggar, bishop of Southern Ohio, formerly rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, was held today in St. Paul's Cathedral.

In the absence of Bishop Lawrence who is detained in Columbus, O., on account of the floods, Bishop Edward M. Parker suffragan bishop of New Hampshire read the lesson. Dean Rousmaniere read the creed and prayers as well as opening sentences of the service.

Rev. Sherrard Billings of Groton School conducted the committal service. The vested choir sang "For All Saints, who from their labors rest," "Oh, Paradise! Oh, Paradise," and "The Strife Is O'er and the Battle Won."

The following clergymen were in the procession: Rev. Messrs. Louis de Cormis, R. M. Harper, F. J. Walton George.

Sherrad Billings and Dean Rousmaniere, who read the committal service at the grave in Mt. Auburn.

The mourners were: Mrs. Jaggar, the widow; Miss Louise Jaggar, his daughter; Edward Jaggar of Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Hetterson, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Gerloff, Mrs. L. C. Jellison and Mrs. O. D. Tuttle. The bearers were: Howard Stockton, Dr. R. M. Lawrence, James F. Wood, George A. Richards, James Schouler, Dr. J. Orin Greene, Dr. Calvin Page and W. J. Mowbray.

Bishop Jaggar died in Cannes, France, last December and his body arrived here this week. His son, Professor Thomas A. Jaggar of Harvard, is now in Honolulu.

Miss Bertha Barnes, contralto, will sing.

LEDYARD QUITS AS DIRECTOR OF THE NEW HAVEN

NEW YORK, March 27.—Lewis Cass Ledyard, one of the oldest directors and largest stockholders of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company and classed as a Morgan representative, has resigned from the directorate of that property.

The financial district attached considerable significance to the resignation yesterday, interpreting it as part of a general movement to eliminate old members of the directorate who took an active part in carrying out the New Haven's policy of acquiring competitors, a policy which has caused so much unfavorable comment.

In explaining the resignation of Mr. Ledyard the New Haven issued the following statement:

At the last meeting of the board of directors Mr. Ledyard resigned as a director, giving as his reason his gradual retirement from a number of business activities. His relations with the management of the New Haven have been entirely cordial and will continue so, no particular significance should be attached to his retirement.

Mr. Ledyard is an officer or director, and in some instances both, of thirty-two other railroads, express, trust and steamship companies in which the Morgans are interested, so that announcement of his intention to withdraw from a number of business activities is expected to be followed by his resignation from other companies.

Whether or not Mr. Ledyard has been disposing of his holdings of New Haven stock recently is not known, but last week, when the stock had a sharp break and touched a new low record makers in the Wall Street district asserted that inside selling was going on. The low figure of 114 was reached last week, in contrast with 142¾ in August of last year.

O'FLANAGAN, G. A. R. ADJUTANT, IS BURIED

A large number of friends and former comrades in arms attended the funeral of Adjutant Matthew J. O'Flanagan of Abraham Lincoln Post 11, G. A. R., former commander of the post, in St. Mary's Church, Charlestown, today. The body, in its flag-draped casket, was escorted from Mr. O'Flanagan's late home, 5 Adams street, to the church by members of the post and veterans of the Thirty-third and Fifth Massachusetts regiments, in which the deceased served during the Civil War. At the church were several officials and veterans from the Soldiers' Home in Chelsea, where in recent years Mr. O'Flanagan had been employed, and members of Colonel Fred B. Bogan Camp, U. S. W. V., of which one of Mr. O'Flanagan's sons, Charles A., is commander.

WIDOW MEETS NEW DELAY IN $500,000 SUIT

Owing to the absence in Phoenix, Ariz., of James W Westervelt, one of the defendants, the hearing on the petition of Mrs. Lewis Flanders of No. 544 Beacon street, for the removal of the executors of the $500,000 estate of her first husband, the late William Butler Woodbridge, was today indefinitely postponed.

The case was scheduled for a hearing Monday at the office of Judge Flint of the Norfolk County Probate Court in the Kimball Building, but was put over until today.

While Mrs. Flanders, her sister, and her two sons, West Pratt and William B. Woodbridge, Jr., waited in the lobby of the suite, the lawyers conferred with Judge Flint. At the close of the conference Judge Flint announced that Attorney Berry, counsel for James W. Westerfelt, explained that Mr. Westerfelt had recently moved from New York to Phoenix, Arizona, and had not been notified. A delay was requested to send notice to the absent executor. It was intimated that the hearing may get under way in two weeks.

Killed in Auto Accident.

Woodbridge was killed in an automobile accident on the North Shore, June 15, 1903. He left a will bequeathing an estate said to be worth $500,000 to his widow and two sons.

He named as executors the men who are now defendants in his widow's suit—Franklin W. Ganse of Newton, a well known Y. M. C. A. philanthropist; James W. Westervelt, formerly of No. 32 Nassau street, New York, and Colonel Percy Parker of Lowell, formerly president of the Columbian National Life Insurance Company, which was founded by Woodbridge.

The executors startled the widow when they appraised the estate at $250,000. She claims that the major portion of the estate was made up of the American Agency Company, which had been a holding company for the Columbian National Life Insurance Company.

Conspiracy Charged.

Seven years after the death of her husband Mrs. Woodbridge was married at Portland, Me., August 6, 1912, to Lewis Flanders, son of a wealthy Boston business man.

She charges that the executors conspired to dissolve the holding company which made her husband's fortune worth $500,000 at least, and on that ground she wants them removed.

Two Everett Girls Beat City Fathers and Hold Positions

Two Everett girls have won a victory over the city government of that city, and as a result will continue to retain their positions as clerks in the office of the city treasurer, Nathan Nichols.

Those two young women were to be replaced in the office by the appointment of an assistant treasurer and collector, this latter office to be created prior to the passage of the budget. One of the young women, Miss Ethel Morrisse, has been in the office for twelve years, and Miss Elsie Dearborn has been in the office nine years. Both were under civil service rules. As a result of their protest the City Council was deadlocked over the budget, city payrolls were threatened with being held up, and all department money was to be shut off. Finally the city government was obliged to give in and pass the budget to give the city the necessary money to run it.

NAME POWER FOR BAY STATE PANAMA BOARD

An announcement today that Charles O. Power of Boston, one of the best known newspapermen and publicity agents in the State, is appointed secretary of the Panama-Pacific Board of Exposition Managers for Massachusetts, was received with interest and approval.

The P.-P. B. of E. M. for M., to give its initials only, is the body of influential men and women appointed by Governor Foss to handle the Massachusetts interests at the big exposition at San Francisco in 1915. As secretary to the board, Mr. Power will have many responsibilities and much detail on his shoulders for several months.

Announcement of the appointment of Mr. Power is made by Colonel Peter H. Carr, chairman of the Panama-Pacific board. Mr. Power will have his office in the Tremont building.

Charles O. Power, or "Charley" Power, as he is known, is a Springfield product, but has been in Boston since October, 1901.

He was graduated from Williams Seminary, went on the Springfield Republican's city staff and became city editor of the Springfield News in 1891. He held that place ten years.

In 1898 he was elected chairman by unanimous vote of the Democratic City Committee of Springfield.

Mr. Power came to Boston, via Worcester. In Boston he joined the AMERICAN staff as the News Bureau or political reporter. Then he became assistant city editor and Sunday editor. Since October, 1911, he has been in publicity work.

His newspaper and political experiences have made "Charley" Power a keen, quick judge of men and affairs. His personal acquaintance in Boston and New England is large.

In 1893, two years after he became a city editor in Springfield, Mr. Power married Miss Jennie Hale of that city. They have two sons and a daughter. The Power home is at No. 104 Hemenway street, Back Bay.

ANGELA MORGAN TELLS OF DAUGHTER'S VISIT TO MRS. EATON IN JAIL

By ANGELA MORGAN.

For the first time since the arrest of their mother a week ago, June Keyes and Dorothy Eaton realize the extent of the tragedy that has come to the family.

Not until the iron doors of Plymouth County Jail swung behind them, not until they faced their mother within the walls of the prison, did the two girls seem fully to understand.

When the full rush of recognition swept over them, the daughters threw themselves upon Mrs. Eaton's neck and wept. For several moments the mother held them to her, as if they were again the little children she had once fondled. All three clung to each other with the cries and endearing words of those who have been separated by calamity. But now it was this same calamity that seemed to bind them closer than ever to each other.

It was one of the most affecting scenes ever enacted within the walls of a jail. Both the attorneys who had accompanied the girls turned away with tear-filled eyes, for this was too sacred a thing for others to look upon.

Dorothy, who had spent hours in the woods gathering May flowers as a special gift for her mother, pressed them into the widow's hand and whispered that they were "just for her."

Then the tragic moment passed; the daughters brightened, and resolutely set out to cheer their mother and to keep her mind from the grim actuality surrounding her.

"Everything's all right, mother," they smiled, bravely. "You just keep up your courage and you'll see that everything will turn out right."

Dorothy Eaton is as lovable and sweet-souled a girl as it has ever been my good fortune to meet. I had an opportunity to study her at close range on the morning before the visit to the jail, and I had also a chance to study Mrs. Keyes in the same way for these were my train companions on the way to Plymouth.

Finds Contrasting Types.

I chatted with them as the way, from Whitman to Plymouth, with Attorney Francis J. Geegan in the party. It was at Whitman that the three boarded the train. I heard some one say a man—in the seat just behind me whisper excitedly to his companion: "There she is—Lizzie Eaton!" and as I looked up the train were just entering.

I made my way forward to their seat, and asked Attorney Geegan if I might chat awhile. He said he hadn't the slightest objection, so I sat down and remained with them until our destination was reached.

On the return trip I was equally fortunate in finding the group my train companions, only this time there was the important addition of Ralph Keyes, husband of June, and Attorney William A. Morse, counsel for Mrs. Eaton.

Whatever may have been said about the alleged estrangement between these two young people, it is certain that on this trip there was no evidence of it. Mrs. Keyes and her husband sat together and talked to each other all the way back to North Abington, where Mrs. Keyes and her sister Dorothy, with Attorney Geegan, made connections for Ashfield. Later I talked with the young husband and found him shy and reserved on the question of his wife's present attitude.

These two trips in the company of the Eaton girls and Ralph Keyes and the two attorneys for Mrs. Eaton offered an opportunity for personal analysis at close range, such as has not had before. I had the psychology of this interesting family one of the most remarkable studies I have ever encountered.

In bold contrasting types, the three characters were there for observation: June Alsworth Keyes, a striking and vigorous personality, full of life and spirit; Ralph Keyes, the husband, the direct antithesis of his wife, quietly quiet and reserved, absolutely averse to expressing himself; at least apparently, who has not made the habit of self-expression and who might almost be willing to effect himself if necessary, for another. Then, third and last in the line, Dorothy Eaton, years old, wholesome, girlish and tender hearted—she who has been the persistent champion of her father from the first.

Trip in Pouring Rain.

This visit to the Plymouth jail seemed to mark an epoch in the life of each girl.

The reason these young women have not visited Mrs. Eaton before, Attorney Morse explained, was that their evidence had to go to the Grand Jury first. It was thought advisable for the daughters not to see their mother until the formality was over.

The trip to the jail was taken in a pouring rain. The party of four got into the waiting automobile—June Keyes, Dorothy Alsworth Keyes, Attorney Geegan and Attorney Morse. The flaps of the carriage were drawn to keep out the driving rain, as well as to protect the daughters from the curious gaze of the public.

This public seems to recognize the Eaton girls wherever they go. So accurate have the published pictures been, that the likenesses are instantly recognized by strangers, and people on the streets crane their necks and cry out, "There they are!" whenever the two appear.

I asked Dorothy and her sister how they felt over all this terrific ordeal and the younger sister smiled as she replied, "Well, we're getting so used to it now, nothing seems to matter as it did."

Previous to my approach, on the trip to Plymouth, these young women sat smiling unseenly as the girls usually might do, over some of the newspaper accounts and pictures.

"That's a funny picture of you, June," Dorothy told her sister. "They've made a mistake and called it a picture of me! But no matter."

And she laughed good naturedly.

Dorothy Alsworth Keyes is a blossom-faced girl, with very large, expressive brown eyes and hair that is almost blonde color, so fine are the tresses. She wore a big black picture hat of beaver, which made an effective background for her girlish good looks.

Throng at Station.

June Keyes wore likewise a black hat, much smaller than her sister's, with a black feather at the back. Her color was very high, her brown eyes were animated, her manner that of one living at high tension, yet holding the reins of control.

When the Plymouth station was reached, they found themselves the cynosure of all eyes. A throng was waiting the train's arrival and as the girls went forward to the carriage that was to take them to the courthouse, people stared openly at them.

Ralph Keyes held an arm over his wife and escorted her to the car, while Attorney Geegan took charge of Dorothy. It was not until the afternoon that Attorney Morse arrived.

Mrs. Eaton is a youngster in jail and a conseller woman than the public may have guessed from the snapshots of her that have appeared. Only thirty-nine years of age, her experience has been one crowded with tragedy. She stands now as a figure commanding sympathy from all who know her story.

FIRE RAGES IN DAYTON, PUTTING REFUGEES IN DANGER

SOLDIERS SHOOT LOOTERS; COLD WAVE ADDS TO TERRORS OF DELUGE.

the Lewiston reservoir threatens to go out at any minute and destroy the remaining parts of the city, with big loss of life.

Rescuing Refugees.

Members of the United States Life Saving Station at Louisville are making their way up the Miami river in motor boats, rescuing marooned families.

A small portion of Dayton's citizens today, from their refuges on the highest point in the city, awaited anxiously to learn of the fate of at least 65,000 of the city's inhabitants hemmed in by raging water.

Although only a little more than a mile from the section where it is feared there has been great loss of life, hundreds of willing men and women looked on helplessly.

Even during the early hours of the third day of the flood any estimate of the number who have perished would be mere guesswork. Thousands have been marooned. How many have survived no one knows.

Although water from swollen streams had been creeping up on the outlying sections for hours, the catastrophe which resulted so seriously came within thirty minutes after the Tarlton reservoir broke. The streets soon became basins for swirling torrents of water, in which boats could not live. Those safe from the flood have had to wait until the water subsides.

Three thousand five hundred dead, more than 35,000 homeless, fire or flood threatening 65,000 people in Dayton, children crying for food, a property loss of $100,000,000, and little relief in sight, summarizes the situation in the deluge stricken districts of Ohio and Indiana.

RESERVOIR THREATENS NEW PERIL TO CITY OF DAYTON

COLUMBUS, O., March 27.—Agencies of relief in flood-torn and prostrate Ohio began to make headway today with the arrival of a fresh army of workers and new appliances in the inundated district.

Thousands of refugees who were marooned and whose lives were imperilled were carried to points of safety.

The fate of Dayton has become more perilous with the weakening of the Lewiston reservoir. If it should let go the remaining parts of the city would be swept away, with tremendous loss of life.

These were the conditions, so far as shattered communication allowed the facts to be gathered, up to noon.

The dead in Ohio are estimated at 3,500, although these figures were compiled while vast areas were cut off and cities were isolated.

The dead in Dayton are estimated at from 1,000 to 2,000, although the fire section of the city could not be approached when this toll was compiled.

Fire Menaces All of Dayton

Governor Cox, from fragmentary messages by telephone, estimated that the loss of life in Dayton would reach 2,000. George F. Burba, the Governor's private secretary, made the same estimate.

Fire is still raging in Dayton and no effective effort can be made to check it. All the boats were being used to carry refugees from the places in which they were marooned.

Thirty buildings at least had been wiped out up to 9 o'clock this morning and the pall of smoke hanging over the downtown district indicated that the section of the business district lying above the water was threatened with destruction.

While the flood at Dayton was falling today, the deluge in other parts of the State rose.

Further devastation of residence quarters in various districts raises the list of homeless to 250,000.

A blizzard is sweeping over Ohio, and the cold weather is causing a vast amount of sickness among the homeless. Children are dying from want of milk and food.

The temperature has fallen twenty degrees since last night.

The naval militia with 100 boats were sent today from Toledo to Dayton.

Women and Children Freezing.

Fifty large skiffs were sent to Dayton from Columbus and were utilized in carrying marooned flood victims from submerged building in the business district. Federal life-saving and their appliances arrived on the scene from Cleveland and joined the army of relief workers.

The railroads gave the relief trains right of way and specials bearing necessaries of life were run into the zones of disaster and distress.

State troops immediately began distribution of food, clothing and medicine. Famine is threatened, for a blizzard swept the great lake region over a large area of the flooded district, bringing with it high winds and snow. The suffering among the homeless and shelterless is terrible.

Appeals were made to Governor Cox to send heavy clothing, blankets and tents.

"Our wives and children are starving and nearly freezing to death, and we must have relief if we are to live," said one message to Governor Cox.

The weather has turned cold during the night and buildings which had been weakened by the flood current were in danger of being carried over by the rising wind.

Thousands Penned in Buildings.

Red Cross workers distributed heavy clothing among the refugees. Hamilton and Middletown were still cut off, and it was impossible to learn the accurate loss of life inflicted by the flood. The worst was feared.

Chief food interest centered in Dayton, where the destruction was heaviest. One report from there stated that half a dozen looters and incendiaries had been shot to death by national guardsmen.

Some of the frantic refugees saved in mite was used to check the sweep of the flames. The lives of thousands of persons penned up in buildings were put in peril by the flames, which licked their way through the frame building with great rapidity. Thousands were compelled to flee over roofs of adjoining structures around St. Clair, Jefferson, Second and Third streets by the the conflagration. Incidents of unusual interests as well as those of tragic pathos have accompanied the deluge.

Three babies were born in a church and another was born in a boat while torrents of rain fell upon the mother. John H. Patterson, head of the National Cash Register Company, set hundreds of his hands to work making coffins. Hundreds of coffins are being sent toward Dayton from Cincinnati and Columbus.

Powerful motorboats were sent into the submerged streets of the northern part of the city, the district which could not be penetrated while the water was highest because of the dangerous current formed by the great Miami.

Boatmen Offered Big Sums.

Police patrol boats reported seeing a number of dead bodies in partially submerged houses. This indicated a rapid rise of the water and showed that many families were taken unawares.

Men of wealth among the marooned offered big sums to boatmen to carry them to safety. The traditional rule of the sea prevailed with the rescuers—women and children were carried first from the tottering and partially submerged buildings.

Some of the frantic refugees raved in absolute insanity at the nearness of death at the picture of misery and desolation about them, and from the suffering entailed by thirst, hunger and exposure.

Boatmen told of 400 persons imprisoned in the Arcade and Y. M. C. A. buildings, who were reduced to the extremity of despair by thirst and hunger.

Piteous Pleas for Food.

Piteous pleas for food had to be disregarded, and hundreds risked their lives by drinking the filthy flood waters.

Six trackloads of provisions sent to Dayton by the Mayor of Springfield were expected to reach the flooded city today unless held up by the freshets. However, provisions arrived from other quarters, and when a call for volunteers was made for the purpose of manning the distributing boats over 500 men responded.

Fire Chief Ramby was reported to have lost his life by the swamping of a skiff while he was directing the placing of dynamite in the fire zone.

Fred Patterson, who, with a companion, risked his life by making a trip through Warren, Jefferson and Main streets in a skiff, told of some of the sights he had seen.

"The windows of the upper floors of the Algonquin Hotel were crowded with white, scared faces," said he. "Men and women called to us, offering great sums of money to be carried to high ground. The silence was impressive. At times it was broken by a roar as a building or a wall gave way and crashed with tremendous splash into the water.

"At times faint cries came over the water from men and women refugees, begging for relief from their intolerable suffering.

Buildings Undermined.

"Many buildings were undermined. The falling water left a mass of sticky, yellow mud, which will be troublesome to remove. I should say the death list will be over 2,000."

The flood had fallen approximately twelve feet by 8 o'clock, although this made little difference in the situation at points where the inland sea was from forty to fifty feet deep.

The martial law zone has been extended beyond Dayton proper. College students who are acting as volunteer guards as well as the State troops have been instructed to observe this order and shoot all vandals.

The following death table was made up here from fragmentary advices and from estimates received at the State House:

Dayton, 2,000; Piqua, 450; Columbus, 150; Delaware, 100; Middletown, 100 to 200; Sidney, 30; Tiffin, 50 to 100; Hamilton, 25; Fremont, 15; Tippecanoe, 5; scattering, 200.

Fears are expressed that the big Columbus reservoir, holding 5,000,000,000 gallons of water and situated on the Scioto river, will burst from the extra strain entailed by the high wind.

Missing at Troy.

Workmen were sent to strengthen its walls. Brief bulletins gathered over shaking and halting wires gave the following details of the State-wide disaster:

At Troy fifty persons are missing.

At Franklin a situation similar to that in Dayton prevails. Fire is raging in the heart of Franklin, three-fourths of which is under water. Seven are known to be dead in Zanesville, where the Muskingum river is out of its banks.

Three hundred workmen and their families at Zanesville are missing. Martial law has been declared there. At Connerburg, the town was saved by dynamiting the Baltimore & Ohio bride, releasing the great Miami's pent-up waters.

The Muskingum River at Marietta is in flood and part of the west side of the city is inundated. Railroad traffic is suffering more keenly than yesterday owing to congestion of troop and relief trains on the few tracks which are not submerged.

The Pennsylvania Railroad has quit selling tickets over the Panandle, which goes through the heart of the district hit by the flood.

So great is the magnitude of the disaster that it has become a subject of national interest and has quickened the sympathies of the entire nation. Offers of relief have come from both the East and the West.

Governor Cox has suggested that all generous hearted persons wishing to help out, telegraph money to a central point, Columbus, or some other, so that it can be expended to the best advantage.

The paralysis of rail traffic precludes the shipment of supplies into the devastated district. However, there is a handicap to this, for the Western Union and Postal Telegraph companies are suffering from fallen wires and washed out poles, and it is impossible to reach many Ohio points.

More Dams Collapse.

State officials who are helping direct relief work labored all night. Governor Cox, after a busy night, said:

"Just the full extent of the disaster is still unknown. We can only hope for the best.

"Serious trouble has been reported from Fremont and Chillicothe, where dams have broken. Troops are being sent there to help the stricken populace. The situation here has improved. We hope that we will be in a position to relieve the want and misery of the bulk of the flood sufferers all over the State."

By today the flood at Dayton had receded to the first floor of the post office, leaving behind a mass of mud and all kinds of debris.

Third street is still a river. The business blocks flanking it are islands.

The Union Station was still under water. President Wilson and Secretary of War Garrison are directing federal relief measures. Tents and foodstuffs will be distributed from United States forts throughout the State.

Members of the United States life saving station at Louisville are making their way up the Miami river in powerful motor boats rescuing marooned families. One railroad, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern, is open across the northern end of the State.

The Situation Summarized.

Part of Piqua has been burned. The Sixth street bridge in Zanesville went down when the mill of the Zanesville Woolen Company was washed against it.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad bridge went out, cutting off communication between the eastern and western sides of the town. From other points the following reports of disaster trickled in:

COSHOCTON—Tuscarawas and Walhonding rivers are in flood and thousands of acres of valuable farmland are under water.

Hundreds of men, women and children in Dayton are fleeing from house top to house top trying to get out of the path of the pursuing flames. They must seek refuge in the upper stories of the buildings as the streets are torrents of racing waters. The undermining of buildings is being washed away by the terrific force of the rushing water. The buildings threaten to tumble, adding new victims to the already large total.

From the roof of the factory of the National Cash Register Company, two miles from the business district, watchers can see the progress of the flames. Eight large buildings and many smaller ones are known to have burned.

Rescue squads are working frantically to try and reach the imprisoned people. Motor boats are stemming the flood, but can reach only the outskirts.

TIFFIN—Part of this city is under water and a part of the remaining half has been burned.

FREMONT—The Lake Shore Railroad bridge has been carried away.

STEUBENVILLE.—Fifteen hundred workmen are idle here from flooded mills, and one hundred families are homeless. The Ohio is rising fast and the lowlands are flooded.

LOCKPORT.—Two men are reported drowned here and three bridges spanning the Tuscarawas River have been destroyed.

DENNISON.—The flood in the Tuscarawas River is the worst in its history. Two railroad bridges of the B. & O., near Uhrichsville, have been washed away.

McCONNELLSVILLE—The Muskingum is out of its banks here, many are homeless; thousands of dollars damage has been done, and martial law prevails.

CAMBRIDGE.—The Muskingum Valley is being swept by a damaging flood. State troops are being sent to the points most seriously affected for relief work.

How To Darken Gray Hair

By A Specialist.

A very satisfactory preparation which darkens gray hair and acts as a corrective agent for dandruff and other diseases of the scalp can be made at small expense and in your own home by dissolving a small box of Barbo Compound in 7 ounces of water, then adding an ounce of bay rum and a quarter ounce of glycerine. Any drug store can furnish these ingredients. This is to be applied once a week until the hair is sufficiently darkened, then every two weeks to keep the hair soft and glossy and the scalp in a healthy condition. It may be used with equal success in darkening the beard. This is a perparation that gives splendid results, both as a hair darkener and a remedy for all scalp disorders, and is well worthy of a trial. You will find it far superior to the ordinary store preparation and much less expensive.—Advertisement.

FUN From the Hasty Pudding Club's and the Technology Boys' New Plays In SUNDAY'S AMERICAN

GOV. COX TELLS AMERICAN HE FEARS DAYTON LOSS OF LIFE WILL EXCEED 2,000

We cannot resist the belief that the loss of life in Dayton will exceed 2,000. Little by little the facts are coming in. In many respects the tragedy is without a parallel in the history of the Republic.

Between ten and twelve thousand people are penned up in the buildings of the business district. The flood came so rapidly they did not have time to reach the hills.

Almost within sight of the Capitol building three men, two women and a child have been hanging to a tree for over twenty-four hours. The waters are running too swift to make their rescue possible—From message of Gov. James M. Cox to Boston AMERICAN.

GOVERNOR COX'S OWN STORY OF APPALLING FLOOD CATASTROPHE

In response to a request from the Boston AMERICAN for an official estimate of the loss of life and the property damage through flood and fire in the Ohio valley, and of what assistance is needed, Governor James M. Cox of Ohio has wired the AMERICAN the most authoritative account that could be gathered at Columbus at the hour of sending the message.

Governor Cox's statement to the AMERICAN is one of the most dramatic summaries of a disaster ever sent out by a State Executive. It is as follows:

(Telegraphed to the Boston American by James M. Cox, Governor of Ohio.)

COLUMBUS, O., March 27.—The exact extent of the appalling flood in Ohio is still unknown. Every hour impresses us with the uncertainty of the situation. The waters have assumed such unknown heights in many parts of the State that it will be hardly less than a miracle if villages and towns are not wiped out of existence in the Southern and Southeastern parts of Ohio. The storm is moving South by East.

Columbus was the centre of all activities in behalf of the stricken city. Every hour has apparently been filled with an accumulation of dramatic circumstances. Piteous appeals have been made by men who were surrounded by water and confronted by the approaching conflagration in the city of Dayton.

Every human energy has been exerted to give relief, and yet the measure of assistance has been comparatively small. It is the belief, however, that soon those imprisoned in the business sections of Dayton can be relieved.

The day began by a storm signal from the weather bureau, advising that there would be a dangerous rise in the waters of the Muskingum River. All the towns along its course, including Zanesville and Marietta, were advised. Before noon the situation assumed a critical aspect at Zanesville and the historic "X" bridge was blown up with dynamite.

The loss of life in Zanesville is uncertain, because all telephone communication ceased. Maretta lies further south on the Ohio River. It cannot be reached, but it is safe to assume that the same devastating results at Zanesville were carried on to Marietta.

A flood situation developed in the Maumee and Sandusky valleys, but the damage to life and property was nothing compared with that in the south.

The one great tragedy remains the Dayton situation. In many respects it is absolutely without parallel in the history of the Republic. The early reports were that the water was receding and that the loss of life would not be more than 100. It soon developed, however, that this city, which is built on several hills and in the valleys of four streams, is unable to send the outside world any accurate idea of the real loss than has been sustained.

North Dayton reported in itself a loss of 100 lives. Later, precisely the same situation was reported from Riverdale. West Dayton was almost completely under water and the houses in Edgemont, a residential section, were so deep in the flood that great destruction to life and property has certainly ensued there.

On the highlands of South Park and East Dayton, pockets had developed and people were drowned on apparent elevations where it would seef naturally impossible. The water at Fitch and Brown streets, which is twenty-five or thirty feet above the elevation in the business section, is ten feet deep.

At this time a river, wild and turbulent, four miles wide, is sweeping through the business section of Dayton, to say nothing of the overflow in the residential sections.

Hotel Roof Black with People.

Telephone communication was established with four points in the city. Bell, the intrepid telephone operator, reported later that he had sent scouts into the different parts of the city by boat. His belief was that the loss of life had been overestimated; but later it was known that easily 500 people had been drowned. We cannot resist the belief that the loss will not be less than 10,000. Little by little the facts are coming in.

The Miami river enters Dayton directly north and south, separating North Dayton from Riverdale. It then makes a complete turn west and runs about three-fourths of a mile before it turns directly at right angles to the south. These bends have been the undoing of the city and caused the breaks in the levee.

Not until today was it apparent that between ten and twelve thousand people are penned up in the business houses, skyscrapers, hotels and the Y. M. C. A., making it apparent that the flood came so rapidly that the business community was unable to reach the hills of the city.

The City Hall is patrolled by a number of policemen inside, and it is so situated as to enable the officers to make more or less accurate estimates of the number of people in the business section.

Fire broke out in the square bounded by St. Clair, Jefferson, Second and Third streets. The blaze was noticed first in a drug store. It swept north and destroyed the St. Paul Evangelical Church, fronting on Liberty Park. The flames then shot to the south, through the wholesale district, consuming two large wholesale liquor houses and threatening the Fourth National Bank building.

The fire is still burning early today. We are advised by telephone that people were seen on the roofs of the buildings in the imperilled square and that they were jumping from one structure to another, keeping safely out of the way of the flames.

The water at this time has receded to about five feet in that part of the city. The appeal came in very dramatic words over the telephone to the State House that unless boats were sent at once from some part of the stricken district, the human loss would be tremendous. It developed that the rescue from this square was complete and that no sacrifice in human life ensued.

Save Women with Block and Tackle.

The Becket Hotel, immediately across the street, was on fire, but the flames were put out. Howard, from the Home Telephone building, reported that the roof of the Becket Hotel was black with people.

South of the stricken square is another wholesale section, and it developed that about thirty-five women and children were in several of the buildings.

The flames leaped across Third street and attacked the square bounded by Third, Fourth, Jefferson and St. Clair streets. Lowe Brothers' paint store was destroyed and another tremendous overflow in human life was imminent. Fifteen men in the Home Telephone building succeeded, however, in rescuing the women and children by the aid of a block and tackle, getting them into the Beaver Power Building, a fireproof structure.

Instructions have been given from Columbus to the militia in the southern part of Dayton to give vigilant eye to the fire district and if the flames start in the direction of the Home Telephone building and the Beaver Power building, to risk passage through the turbulent river now running through the city with boats.

Today fifty boats will go into the business district from South Park. The naval militia, with one hundred boats, left Toledo at midnight. The federal life-saving crew, with equipment, is due at Dayton from Cleveland soon.

Unless the developments are unseemly, the whole situation should be well in hand during today.

We are disquieted, however, by the report from the Lendatone observer that the wind has changed and water is beating against the banks on the south shore, which has been standing the pressure and impulse of the waves for ten days. If the reservoir should give way, then the most imaginative could not possibly bring an accurate impression of what will happen in Dayton.

NEW ENGLANDERS WAIT FOR NEWS OF RELATIVES

All over New England today anxious friends and relatives awaited news from their loved ones in the devastated flood districts of the Middle West. The number of Massachusetts people in the flood zone is large.

Charles E. Ayres, a Worcester proofreader, left two weeks ago to visit his mother in Dayton, O. No word has been received from him.

Fred L. Willis, general secretary of the Worcester Y. M. C. A., awaits words from relatives in the tornado district. John McLaughlin, Jr., of Worcester was a student at the Ohio State University in Columbus. His father at No. 29 Believue street, Worcester, seeks information concerning his fate.

Mrs. Ellen Walker Shirk of No. 9 Ripley street, Worcester, has relatives in Peru, Ind., where reports say that scores of people were drowned. Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Thompson, parents of C. L. Thompson, manager of a Worcester department store, resided in Riverdale, a suburb of Dayton, O. C. B. Hill, brother of Edward C. Hill, employed in the same store, lived in a block next to the National Cash Register factory.

Others Are Worrying.

Other Worcester people are worrying about relatives. Mrs. Peter C. Curuin has a son, John, who went to Akron, O., three weeks ago.

Parents and other near relatives of Mrs. Harry C. Wilson, wife of Rev. Mr. Wilson, pastor of the Lake View Methodist Church, live in Ohio. Mrs. C. H. Smith had a sister, Mrs. Loren Berry, and two brothers, Edward and Cove Kachpole, living in the flooded districts.

Mrs. J. H. Dorsey has a niece, Mrs. Lester N. Stouffer, in Akron, O., with two children in her family. Ralph Allen, son of Dwight F. Allen, was in Dayton when the waters rose. Mrs. Nora Dolan's son, Patrick A. Dolan was at Brown, Ia. Rev. H. P. Smith, former pastor of the Dewey Street Baptist Church, is in Dayton, as is also H. J. Harlow, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Harlow.

Five Leominster men are known to be in the stricken district. George S. Ellis was at Terre Haute, Ind., Harry Cook, Cleon Johnson, Harold Burdett and Noel B. Barnum were in Akron.

Milford Pastor's Son Safe.

Mrs. Mark W. Pickle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Banister of West Brookfield, lived in Dayton with her husband, a street railway conductor.

Rev. Dr. Frank A. Warfield, pastor of a Milford church, has received a telegram from his son in Omaha announcing the latter's safety.

Among the Providence people, known to have been in Dayton, O., are Mr. and Mrs. Charidon D. Putnam, John W. Parker, and the mother, uncle and cousin, all three of whom live within two blocks of the river in Dayton. John B. McIlmain and brother and sister visiting in Dayton.

Miss Mabel Straker of Attleboro, who graduated from the high school in that town last year, went to Dayton a short time ago to visit relatives.

A particularly sad case is that of Mrs. Elizabeth Spooner of Bristol, R. I., whose son, William B. Spooner, Jr., arrived in Dayton to work for the National Cash Register Company only last Sunday. She believes that he is dead.

The Spirit of the Flood

By FRANK H. MELOON.
of the Boston AMERICAN staff.

Out of my river home I rise,
A spectre weird and grim;
With a deep-toned roar I rush ashore
Over the levee's rim!

And I mock the wisdom of the wise,
And the folly of the fool despise,
As I snatch them both in a twinkling breath,
As I hold them close in my arms of death.
Mother and father, daughter and son,
And babe in arms—I have pity for none.
Wind and flame in my wake are come
Till the bravest mortal is stricken dumb.
With the dread tornado and scourging fire,
I know I shall have my heart's desire.

Out of my river home I rise,
A spectre weird and grim;
With a deep-toned roar I rush ashore
Over the levee's rim!

WELLESLEY GIRLS OFF TOMORROW TO AID RELIEF WORK

A large party of Wellesley College girls whose homes are in the Ohio and Indiana flood districts will leave tomorrow noon, when the college vacation begins, to assist in the relief work and learn of the safety of friends and relatives. They hope to be able to reach the scene despite the disarrangement of train schedules.

Among the students to depart tomorrow are: Elizabeth J. Downer, Dayton; Jeannette L. Edwards, Youngstown; Henrietta Gilmore, Omaha; Grace M. Hatch, Cleveland; Ruth M. Hayden, Fremont, O.; Daphne Hoofman, Bloomington, Ind.; Esther Johnson, Columbus; Jessie Achilis, Toledo; Beale Barkehile, Toledo; Harriet Binks, Omaha; Alenda M. Bolton, Cleveland; Evelyn L. THOUSANDS AID STRICKEN REFUGEES AT OMAHA

Regulars and State Troops from City Employes in Organized Relief Work.

OMAHA, March 27.—Thousands of soldiers, both of the regular army and the state militia, and all the city employes, are working today for the relief of the thousands made homeless by the tornado.

Relief stations have been opened throughout the devastated district. Doctors and nurses are working night and day in overcrowded hospitals caring for the wounded and maimed.

Stories of the terrific force of the wind are being told today. A cottage sailing through the air, glass splinters driven like nails into a plano, a street car blown on top of a horse and buggy, were among some of the freaks of the wind.

T. H. Porter, a newspaper man, tells the following story:

I saw one house picked up and hurled a quarter of a block. It landed against a house in which my wife was. I dug her out of the ruins uninjured.

I saw a cottage come sailing through the air many feet above the ground. It struck the fifth story of the Sacred Heart Convent. It smashed the south wing of the convent building as if it had been paper.

A great white ball of twisting fire rode in the van of the whirling storm cloud. It was accompanied by the hum as of a billion of bees. It was the most terrifying sight of the forces of nature I ever saw in my life.

Conductor Caldwell was standing beside the wreck of a street car. He said:

I saw the storm coming, gave the signal to stop and ran for a cellar. A scantling was driven through the side of the car and wedged between the seats.

For two minutes huge timbers and pieces of steel rained upon the cellar covering. When the storm had passed I crawled out and picked up two of the passengers who were lying unconscious in the streets.

F. J. Adams, who was on his way to catch a train when caught by the tornado, said:

I saw a man picked up and blown through a plate glass window. He died instantly. A taxi turned a corner, running as usual. Suddenly it was caught by the wind and lifted bodily over a wall six feet high. The chauffeur must have been killed.

I saw a man running from a store the roof of which was blown off. He was whirled away more than 1100 feet by the wind.

A large tree was torn up by the roots, blown across the street and driven through a house like a nail.

A telephone pole was yanked out of the ground and driven many feet into the asphalt.

SNAPSHOT of rescue party taking out body of one of Omaha tornado's 250 victims from debris of a ruined residence in the heart of the stricken district. Some of the scenes were so heartrending that the relief parties were overcome.

CONNECTICUT RIVER RISING VERY RAPIDLY; SPRINGFIELD ALARMED

SPRINGFIELD, March 27.—The Connecticut River, which for the past two weeks has been steadily rising, had reached a height of sixteen feet above low water mark at 8 o'clock today. Men are patrolling the dyke district and hourly reports are being made. The water is increasing at the rate of a foot an hour. Already the farming and low lands of Chicopee, North Chicopee and West Springfield are submerged.

The dykes are made to hold a rise of twenty-two feet. If the water increases six feet more, nothing can prevent the city from being flooded. Hundreds are making preparations to leave the city in case the danger mark is reached.

The river at Woodsville, N. H., is the highest in twelve years. Heavy rain is falling throughout the district and all of the lowlands are submerged. There has been little damage reported, although several washouts have been reported along the Boston & Maine Railroad.

A northbound train from New York to Boston was stalled south of Newbury and the passengers were taken in carriages to the nearest railroad centre.

TWO DEAD IN STORM, MANY ARE INJURED IN BAY STATE GALE

Two men are dead today as the result of the terrible electrical tempest which wrought havoc throughout the Bay State. The killed are Herbert V. Smith, a Lexington news dealer, and Albert M. Carroll of Dorchester, employed as a brakeman on the Boston & Maine. Smith was crushed to death when his barn collapsed before the impact of the heavy wind. Carroll was struck by lightning while walking along the top of a freight train.

Dozens of persons were injured in the sweep of the wild storm. Great trees were torn up by the roots and chimneys blown down. At Lexington a fifty-foot windmill and water tower fell with a crash before the gale. At South Lynnfield a $20,000 fire was caused by the lightning. In some parts of the State floods were reported.

A phenomenal feature of the storm was the dropping of the mercury twenty-one degrees in a single hour, from 69 to 48 degrees.

Dr. Harry Roberts of No. 46 Westland Avenue, Boston, was passing with a party of friends in an automobile when lightning struck E. M. Fletcher's barn at Law rence's Corner. All were so affected by the shock that medical assistance was summoned when they reached the Suntaug Inn nearby. Two horses perished in the fire as the barn burned, but eighteen head of cattle were rescued from the flames.

BUILDING COFFINS AND BOATS AS FIRE RAGES IN DAYTON

NEW YORK, March 27.—A striking story of conditions in the stricken district of Dayton was gained by reports given out at the office of the American Telephone & Telegraph Company here. Employes tapped wires near the district and transmitted stories to Phoneton, six miles north. Thence they were forwarded here.

One of these messages from an employe says:

One of our men who returned from the north side of the submerged section of Dayton, says the scenes there are indescribable. People are huddled in churches and public school buildings, and there is danger of these collapsing.

Three babies were born in one church. One was born in a boat while its mother was being conveyed to safety. The rain was pouring in torrents at the time and the mother had been for six hours or more without necessary aid. Such scenes are common.

Every effort was made by us to aid the sufferers with supplies and such other help as we could.

There is a school building said to contain 600 persons and indications were that it would collapse in a short time. Two men seen using a pleasure boat to view the scene had to be pressed into rescue service by the police at the point of shotgune.

People are being conveyed to safety as rapidly as possible with the limited means at hand. Farmers and others for miles around are trying to prevail upon rescued ones to go to the rescuers' homes, but in most cases families are split up and the members picked up refuse to leave until all have been rescued.

The National Cash Register Company has hands at work making boats and coffins and has ordered 500 coffins from Cincinnati. The beautiful steel High School building is a wreck.

Many persons were seen jumping from roof to roof during the fires. Indications are that there will be much loss of life before help arrives to get these to places of safety.

The relief committee reported 500 dead and 10,000 homeless. Many dead bodies were floating by. There is great danger of the spread of disease.

A message later from Phoneton, received at the American Telephone & Telegraph Company offices here said:

The fire is increasing rapidly. Three or four hotels and churches and numerous other buildings are burning.

Last reports from our Mr. Anderson, who is stationed at a telephone, and who is heading a relief party in North Dayton, indicate, he thinks, that the reports of the loss of life have been exaggerated.

A report received at the Phoneton station and transmitted here said that the town of Piqua was on fire.

"For the past hour," another message said, "burning buildings in Dayton have been plainly visible from our office here. The rain has subsided now, so the fire has practically nothing to check it."

DOROTHY DODD SHOES

$3.50 TO $5.00

The artistic shapes, the strictly first-class workmanship, the beautiful finish—all make for durability and are worthy the fine leathers.

Without the least business bias or prejudice, but simply studying the "DOROTHY DODD" Shoes, we are inspired to remark that the world doesn't need the custom shoemaker with his kit and limited stock of leathers and findings.

We wish every reader could visit the factory where "DOROTHY DODD" Shoes are made—and see the materials that go into them—see the skilled specialists manipulating them in their raw state.

The manufacturing processes are magical and have supplied texts for numerous economic essays.

Meanwhile, every woman may test the comfort and service of "DOROTHY DODD" Shoes. They are at their Spring prettiest just now.

NEW FLOOD MENACES OHIO RIVER VALLEY

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 27.—A new flood today menaces the great Ohio valley. The Ohio River reached a 60-foot level shortly after midnight, according to meagre reports reaching here, and is still rising. Dispatches say that Cincinnati itself is menaced by floods from the constantly rising Ohio River. Except to the south, flood conditions have almost isolated the city.

Telegraph and telephone lines are down and interurban traction lines are badly crippled. Only to the south is train and wire service working.

At Memphis the river is rising hourly and will reach the twenty-five foot level today or Friday.

Marietta and McConnelsville are reported under several feet of water. Chillicothe, O., Circleville, Portsmouth, Ironton and all points in the Miami Valley are cut off from communication. All are report ed under the water.

Advices received shortly after 9:30 state that Cincinnati is still being deluged by a heavy rain.

FIFTY LIVES LOST AS SHENANGO RIVER FLOODS CITY OF SHARON, PA.

SHARON, Pa., March 27.—That fifty persons have lost their lives here in the flood of the Shenango River was the estimate today. It was also believed that lives had been lost in other parts of the Shenango valley.

The flood continues to spread destruction through the whole Shenango valley. Appeals to Governor Tener have been made and it is expected the State would rush supplies and provisions for the aid of the homeless.

The property damage done will amount to nearly $3,000,000. The Sharon business section today was covered with from three to four feet of water and train service has been suspended.

The three-story brick building of the Sharon Herald was wrecked by the floods.

NEW YORK RIVERS, HIGHEST SINCE 1902, THREATEN FLOODS

NEW YORK, March 27.—Rivers and creeks in New York State have reached their highest point in years and thousands of dollars of damage will result.

A part of Port Edward is inundated. In many localities farmers were forced to move their livestock to places of safety.

The Delaware & Hudson Railroad has suspended traffic on its Adirondack division.

Floods due to breaks and overflows in the Erie Canal at Waterloo, Seneca Falls, Port Byron and elsewhere near Auburn, have caused great loss.

The Genesee River is higher than at any time since 1902 and is rising rapidly. Many Rochester industries dependent upon water power have been forced to close.

At Hornell the Canisteo River has overflowed, while at Olean 1,000 persons have been stationed there to keep the structure intact.

Four oil tanks are floating about the city of Olean and the coating of oil on the water is making the danger from fire serious.

Here Is the Biblical Story of 150 Days' Flood and the Ark

Here's the narrative from the Book of Genesis, Chapter viii., 10th to 24th verses, of the Deluge, the greatest flood in history:

And it came to pass after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened.

And the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

In the self same day entered Noah, and Shem, and Japheth, the sons of Noah, and Noah's wife, and the three wives of his sons with them, into the ark.

They, and every beast after his kind, and all the cattle after their kind, and every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth after his kind, and every fowl after his kind, every bird of every sort.

And they went in unto Noah in to the ark, two and two of all flesh, wherein is the breath of life.

And they that went in went in male and female of all flesh, as God had commanded him: and the Lord shut him in.

And the flood was forty days upon the earth: and the waters increased, and bare up the ark, and it was lift up above the earth.

And the waters prevailed, and were increased greatly upon the earth; and the ark went upon the face of the waters.

And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the earth: and all the high hills, that were under the whole heaven, were covered.

Fifteen cubits upwards did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered.

And all the flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man:

All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died.

And every living substance was destroyed which was upon the face of the ground, both man, and cattle, and the creeping things, and the fowl of the heaven; and they were destroyed from the earth: and Noah only remained alive, and they that were with him in the ark.

And the waters prevailed upon the earth an hundred and fifty days.

FEARFUL COMMERCIAL LOSS APPALS FINANCIERS

NEW YORK, March 27.—What will be the after-effects of the destructive floods and storms is a question which commercial and financial people are trying to answer from basis of meagre information at command. Few venture to question the estimate of property impairments and losses of corporate and private nature as not much less than $100,000,000.

In banking circles the view is that we are still in the exaggerating stage, but that real impairment of wealth productive character is bound to be enormous. The president of a large institution says:

"Wherever destruction has occured in working resources, there will be need of some borrowing to resume business. Many corporations have temporarily no income at all; that will require other less urgent uses of funds to wait."

"Those flood losses may not raise money rates," said another financier, "because rates have been growing easier internationally at least for a week. But there will fall a special burden on financial resources of the country, because of this series of calamities. The demand will, however, come gradually after the first rush and can be taken care of without serious consequence."

Six States Are Swept.

The storm includes six of the most populous North Central States—Nebraska, Missouri, Iowa, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and portions of western Pennsylvania. The States west of Pennsylvania have a population of 21,000,000. They contain fifty cities of over 25,000 people and 225 towns and cities with populations of 2,500 and over. All these are connected by railway and electric lines, by telephone and telegraph, and every town is a centre of a network of rural telephone. Nearly all have some kind of public works. Each has to depend on local, State or national financial centres for increments of capital needed for more than ordinary outlay.

Needs for reconstruction and repairs will run as follows:

Resume of the Destruction.

1. Railway bridges, trucks, stations and embankments, of which lines there are 54,000 miles in this six States.

2. Interurban trolley lines connecting rural with urban communities now practically at a standstill.

3. Electric light and gas works. In many cases broken, with entire suspension of earnings.

4. Demolition or imprisonment of water works; breaking of dams as main sources of supply.

5. Long distance and local telegraph and telephone lines, including county systems covering rural territory.

6. Natural gas lines on which many industries as well as municipalities are dependent. Flooding of coal mines, most of which in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois lie in the lowlands.

7. Hydro-electric corporations whose reservoirs are usually among the first to suffer, throwing out of business activities dependent on them.

8. Public buildings in cities, towns and county seats.

9. County roads and bridges, and village and farm property in a pathway of storm not less than fifty miles wide and 1,000 miles long.

10. Outlays on leases, enormous losses to all kinds of corporate business, in suspended railway traffic, trolley operations, municipal utilities and mercantile stocks actually destroyed.

NEW YORK CENTRAL PRESIDENT RUSHING REPAIRS ON BIG FOUR

NEW YORK, March 27.—President W. C. Brown of the New York Central Lines issued the following statement:

No further reports of importance from Dayton, Ohio, or other points in the flooded district were receive.. this morning except that there were no lights in the city during the night, making relief work practically impossible.

Advices just received from Cleveland are to that there has been rain and snow during the night and that at present a blizard is raging with temperature a little below freezing.

We have organized a force, gathered from the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern, Michigan Central and New York Central, large enough to push the work of repair on the Big Four lines in Ohio with the utmost speed as soon as the water goes down enough to permit the work to begin.

No effort will be spared to establish railroad communication with all points reached by the Big Four lines as promptly as conditions will permit.

WILL COLLECT FOR FLOOD FUND IN NEWPORT CHURCHES

NEWPORT, March 27.—Contributions here for the Ohio flood sufferers begun in earnest today. Former Mayor F. F. Gaertsen heads the list. Rev. Stanley C. Hughes of Trinity Church will take up a "flood collection" next Sunday. Sums of clothing will be forwarded to Ohio by all the churches.

SITUATION IN INDIANA IS SLIGHTLY IMPROVED

INDIANAPOLIS, March 27.—The flood situation in this State was slightly improved today. Heller parties carrying food, medicines, clothing and other supplies are reaching the stricken sections not attending the interfering and thereby of the 150,000 or more who have been made homeless. The angry waters which exacted a toll of from 200 to 500 human lives and caused a property loss estimated between $25,000,000 and $40,000,000 today were reported to be slightly receding. The heavy rains have ceased in some sections and there has been an appreciable decrease in the height of the swollen waters.

Refugees arriving here today from the sections visited by the flood tells harrowing stories of their experience. The most vivid of these were related by those who escaped death in Peru and in the suburbs of this city. When the White River, which runs through this city, broke through the levee yesterday, drowning from fourteen to thirty persons, there were many escapes from death. Thrilling stories of rescues were recounted by the survivors today.

Bodies in the Water.

Harvey Reed, policeman, who assisted in the rescue of more than a score of persons, today declared it as his opinion that the death list in West Indianapolis will be very large, and that the estimate of from fourteen to thirty deaths is too small. "We saw many bodies floating on the water," declared Reed. "We were so busy rescuing the living ones we made no efforts to reach the bodies. I saw a mother and three children drown. They were clinging to a house, but before we could reach them in our little boat they became exhausted, relaxed their grips and dropped into the yellow waters that were from six to nine feet deep.

"In one house we saw a body swirled around by eddying waters, bumping against the windows. We looked in and saw several other bodies. I think that most of those drowned were trapped in their homes when the torrent swept along, and that no real estimate of the dead can be made until the water goes down."

It was a desolate, ghastly sight that presented itself in Peru when dawn broke today. The yellowish flood waters moved along through the streets carrying with them wreckage, the bodies of animals and the bodies of humans numbering in the estimate of 150 to 200 drowned when the Wabash overflowed its banks.

Rescue parties in boats worked unceasingly through the night, and when day came had taken from the housetops all those who had clung there since the first inrush of the waters.

Many had become so exhausted before the rescuers could reach them that they died and it was feared today that the list would be increased, as several persons have not been accounted for. There was a shortage of food and water there, but word was received that a substantial supply would be sent into the city before nightfall.

Two are reported dead at Lafayette and the same number at Noblesville, while the homeless in each city totals about 700.

Meagre details from the valley of the White Water river state that the dead throughout that section may total twenty-five, perhaps more, and that there is great suffering among the survivors.

30,000 Reported Homeless.

More than 30,000 are reported homeless throughout the Southern portion of the State and it was impossible today to place any estimate on the loss.

Through railroad traffic in this State was almost at a standstill. Local trains loaded with supplies for those in the stricken districts were able to proceed only to the edge of the flooded sections. There was practically no telegraphic or telephonic communication from the stricken cities today. News came from refugees who had made all day and all night trips on boats or wabbly rafts.

Terre Haute was great alarm in towns on the Ohio River today. The big stream is rising at an alarming rate and it is feared that the rainfall will cause it to break its banks, flooding most of the southern portion of the State. The inhabitants of that section are moving their livestock and household effects to higher ground.

PITTSBURGH MENACED BY STEADILY RISING RIVER

PITTSBURGH, March 27.—Weather Forecaster Pennywitt issued a bulletin at 11 o'clock today predicting that the river here would reach a stage of 31 feet by tomorrow.

Traffic on all railroad lines out of here was demoralized today, owing to floods. All trains on Pan Handle west of Dennison, Ohio, have been annulled, and the Pennsylvania Railroad announced that at present only three trains a day would be run to Chicago, and two from that place East.

Service on Pittsburg, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railroad was annulled west of Alliance, Ohio, and trains were being detoured by way of Cleveland, thence to Chicago. Passenger service in western Pennsylvania was practically at a standstill today. Freight service on all lines has been entirely discontinued.

Floods Close Mills.

The floods in Mahoning and Shenango rivers have already closed about half the steel making and steel finishing capacity in the two valleys. The two valleys make 10 per cent. or more of the country's steel. Mills closed will not resume before next week at the earliest.

At least a score of lives are known to have been sacrificed to flood waters in western and northern Pennsylvania, and portions of West Virginia. Almost that number are believed to have perished, but communication is seriously handicapped and accurate information is not available. The property loss, it is believed, will reach $3,000,000.

Upward of 50,000 working people are out of employment temporarily through the flooding of hundreds of industrial plants.

Towns Under Water.

Sharon and Newcastle, both in Pennsylvania, and Wheeling, W. Va., face a grave flood situation. The Pennsylvania towns are completely under water. Its height at some points being fifteen feet.

Wheeling, W. Va., is confronted today with one of the worst flood situations in its history. With the Ohio River gradually rising and a great portion of the city already under water, a stage of forty-five feet is expected at Wheeling before nightfall. Many hundreds of families are homeless and much water has already made great inroads upon property. Six fatalities occurred there.

The river this morning is rising slowly. A wide area of Allegheny County is inundated, while a number of streets in the downtown business section are under water.

Troop D, Pennsylvania State Constabulary, is policing Sharon, Penn. Troop A returned at Greensburg early today for destinations below Pittsburgh, where the flood situation is causing anxiety.

GETTING GRAY? USE SAGE TEA TO RESTORE NATURAL COLOR OF HAIR

Says Sage and Sulphur Darkens Hair Beautifully and Ends Dandruff.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair, says a well-known local pharmacist. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful and even today this simple preparation has no equal. Millions of women and men, too, who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive use only Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Nowadays we are not bothered with the task of gathering the sage leaves and the mussy mixing at home. Simply ask at any drug store for a 50-cent bottle of the ready to use preparation, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy." Customers like this best because it darkens so naturally; so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it contains ingredients which take off dandruff, stop scalp itching and falling hair. No, it isn't a dye or even like it. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color.

What delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that besides beautifully darkening the hair they say it brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

BOWELS SLUGGISH, STOMACH SOUR, GASSY, UPSET? CASCARETS GREAT

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases, that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nausea, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means your stomach is full of sour bile—your liver is torpid—your bowels constipated. It isn't your stomach's fault—it isn't indigestion—it's biliousness and constipation.

Try Cascarets; they immediately sweeten the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter from the bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended. A Cascaret tonight straightens you out by morning.

ROXBURY TO DISCUSS "L" CARS TONIGHT

Edward Emmet McGrath of Roxbury will NOT write to Matthew C. Brush, second vice-president, at No. 101 Milk street, Boston.

It was stated yesterday on the part of the Boston Elevated Railway Company that people with complaints or suggestions about the service can get speedy action by writing to Mr. Brush, who is young, ambitious and eager to serve.

Mr. McGrath rises to object.

Being a Representative in the General Court, a legislator for the people of Ward 18, Roxbury, Mr. McGrath is worth listening to. He said today:

The people of Ward 18 are going to hold an indignation meeting tonight in their ward room at the Roxbury Court House. We are going to discuss there the miserable service we have lately been getting, and are still getting, from the Boston Elevated Railway Company. It would be impossible for me to write out for Mr. Brush all the things our people have to say about the Elevated and its service, but if Mr. Brush wants to come out and visit us he will be received with open arms.

Anyhow, I do not believe in "writing to Brush about it." We have a State Board of Railroad Commissioners. We must have them for a purpose. It seems to me that the Railroad Commission is the place to go with complaints. So we are going to ask the Commission to give us back some of the things we have lost. These are some of the things we want:

Belt line cars to run as formerly by way of Norfolk House past Roxbury Crossing, until a complete circuit is made.

Brookline cars to run down Tremont street as formerly, instead of all going to Dudley street.

Restoration of the Roxbury Crossing-North Station cars to a ten-minute schedule.

Taxi surface and subway cars to the South shall not end their run at Lenox street but may continue to Roxbury Crossing, Jamaica Plain and Brookline.

Somebody says, in the AMERICAN, that the thing to do is to write to the Elevated about it.

That has been tried by Roxbury people. Hunt, the dry goods man, Sawyer the druggist, O'Brien of Doyle & O'Brien, Kelley the furniture dealer, Lidfier the furniture man, and many others tell me that a year ago they asked the Elevated to improve the service.

Crowded on the Cars Going Home? Write to Elevated Company

Were you delayed in reaching your home last night by crowded Elevated cars?

Are there too few Elevated cars running to your neighborhood?

Have you any complaints against the service of the Boston Elevated?

The management of the Elevated wants you to write them all about it.

BE BRIEF. BE SPECIFIC.

Address your complaints to Second Vice-President, Boston Elevated Railway Company, No. 101 Milk street, Boston.

Write him of your troubles. He tells the AMERICAN that just complaints will be remedied. If they are not, then write to the AMERICAN, and we shall see that the strong arms of PUBLICITY are brought to bear on the Elevated. But in the meantime, take the Elevated at its word. Give it a fair chance; and if you have any complaints against the Boston Elevated and its service, write now.

ATTEMPT TO REOPEN HEARING ON CASSIDY BILL IS THWARTED

The men and interests fighting Mr. Cassidy's pure food bills in the Legislature yesterday made a daring attempt to secure a private hearing on one of the Cassidy measures, the regular hearings upon which have been closed. Junius T. Auerbach, representing Mr. Cassidy, was notified and was present. The hearing was brief, but several remarkably interesting points were brought out. Mr. Cassidy tells the story today.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Alton E. Briggs, representing the Fruit and Produce Exchange, yesterday attempted to secure a reopening of the hearings upon one of my bills designed to strike the word 'knowingly' out of the law on selling decomposed food.

Mr. Briggs did not appear at the hearing. Wood of the project came to my ears. The Committee on Public Health was to meet in executive session at 10:30 yesterday morning. Executive sessions are private.

Produce Men Gather.

A dozen produce men had gathered about the door of the committee room in anticipation, perhaps, of a chance to be heard. The committee would have refused to hear them, if Junius T. Auerbach representing me, had not been on hand. Mr. Auerbach invited the produce men to go ahead, so far as he was concerned.

The result was that a clever attempt to present facts or arguments to the committee without our knowledge, was thwarted. Daniel P. Sweeney, who said he was a produce dealer, proceeded to argue against the bill.

The law as it stands today provides that no one can be punished for selling rotten food unless it can be proved that he knowingly sold it. The bill under discussion would make the retailer responsible, whether he knew anything about the rottenness of the food or not. In other words, it would make him make it his business to know.

Mr. Sweeney presented no new arguments against the bill. The hearing was chefly interesting because of the questions that came from the committee.

Dr. Bigelow's Statement.

Dr. Bigelow, the House Chairman of the Committee, took exception to the statement of Mr. Sweeney, that the farmer gets a square deal from the commission man.

"I know a man," said Dr. Bigelow, "who sent a load of squashes to the commission man. The merchant notified him that they were bad and demanded that my friend take 25 per cent. off the price. My friend hurried to Boston and found that as a matter of fact a few of the squashes were very slightly spoiled. He said to me:

"'If they'll try to work me that way —when I'm doing a big business with them—what won't they do to the small farmer.'"

Dr. Bigelow thus brought out the fact that every pure food law, this and all the rest, is a benefit to the farmer, because it forces dishonest goods out of the market, and leaves only honest goods to compete with his produce—thus giving him a square deal.

Senator Ezra W. Clark, Senate chairman of the committee, brought out another point by his questions. He said:

Make Someone Responsible.

"I believe someone has to be made responsible for impure foods. You (Mr. Sweeney) says a dealer in a small way can't take all the necessary precautions to protect his customers. I say then let there be fewer dealers. In my own case, three milk wagons stop in front of my house. I get milk from one, and each of my two neighbors gets milk from two different firms. Thus it takes three wagons to deliver three quarts of milk to the same house.

"I know they say competition is the life of trade—but much competition merely increases expenses to the consumer and decreases service."

Senator Charles F. McCarthy, who has led the pure food fight in the Senate, asked Mr. Sweeney:

"Did you know that this bill to strike the word 'knowingly' out of the statute is in accord with the laws of many of the States and the national law?"

Mr. Sweeney Didn't Know.

Mr. Sweeney said he didn't know that.

"And don't you know," continued Senator McCarthy, "that this word nullifies the law and that you can't convict a man who make his defence upon the ground that he did not 'know the foods he sold were rotten?'"

Sweeney said he doubted that statement.

"Joseph L. Johnson, city inspector of Cambridge for a number of years, assures us that it's true," said the Senator.

Senator McCarthy in an address to the Maynard Business Men's Association, told something of the pure food fight of the year. He described the various bills which have been introduced, and the opposition which has been presented by the enemies of pure food. His address was applauded, and he was bombarded with questions from the audience, showing the intense interest in food topics which has been aroused by the fight.

After Mr. Sweened had completed his remarks, Junius T. Auerbach spoke for two minutes. He said:

This Bill Is Necessary.

"This bill is necessary if the law is to really protect the consumer at all. The present law is no adequate protection.

"The produce men cite impossible cases of capricious which might be secured against them on the ground that they sold a crate of oranges containing one or two bad ones. You gentlemen know as a matter of common sense, and everyone else knows, that no inspector of the health service would push a case like that, and if he did, the judge would simply place the case on file.

"This law is necessary. Another bill almost identical, has passed both House and Senate. The bill will force the retailer to beware that he doesn't sell any rotten foods. In the past the retailer had gone carelessly on his way—unless he were a man of high business ideals—and the consumer has had to do all the bewaring.

"This bill will hurt no honest retailer. I fail to see how any honest merchant can oppose it."

$3,000 FOR ALIENATION.

A verdict of $3,000 was awarded Richard Lyon of Malden today, by a jury in the Cambridge Superior Civil Court, in his suit for $15,000 against Peter N. Fischer, alleging alienation of his wife's affections. The jury was out an hour.

Try This On Your Husband—If He Drinks

It Makes New Men of Drunkards And Homes Happy

The woman whose husband is a habitual drinker is a martyr—a slave and a victim. The whole family suffers anguish and sometimes want. Why not cure him? Renova has secretly cured hundreds of good men whom drink was dragging down to destruction. Renova coats much less than the poison sold in barrooms and Renova produces men who have been drunkards for years.

Just do this—go to Riker-Jaynes' and ask for a package of Renova; put a little of it in his tea or coffee and he won't know anything about it, because it is tasteless. The first thing you know he'll be drinking less and less until he just hates the stuff. Wonderful, isn't it? And true. Two hundred men in one town saved by Renova.

If you'd like to try it—free—before you buy a whole package, write in confidence to the Renova Co., 204 Broadway, New York, for a sample and proofs of what Renova does for victims of intemperance.

SAY KID CARTER WAS QUEER IN RING AND OUT

The trial of James J. Jennings of Chelsea, alias Kid Carter, who is charged with killing William H. McPherson in a South End barroom, was continued today. The defense put on a number of witnesses who testified to Jennings' eccentricities and alleged mental derangement, and rested at 10:45.

The first witness was Frederick W. O'Brien, a pugilist and proprietor of a Chelsea poolroom. He testified that he had fought with Jennings on several occasions and that Jennings acted in a peculiar manner, both in the ring and after the fights. He told of one occasion in New York when Jennings engaged in a bout. After the bout Jennings attempted to attack his opponent. The witness said that he had frequently seen Jennings drink, and that when under the influence of liquor was almost insane.

He said that on one occasion Jennings boxed in Gloucester and that he lost his head at the beginning of the fight and was knocked out shortly afterward. District Attorney Pelletier asked about the boxing record of the prisoner and the witness said that Jennings had fought perhaps 100 bouts and won half of them. O'Brien related an incident which he witnessed one night when Jennings was asleep. The witness said that Jennings fought a mimic battle in bed, swinging and kicking with great energy.

The next witness was John J. Cleary, who runs a lunchroom at Chelsea. He testified to strange actions on the part of Jennings, who he said, would stand before a mirror and make passes. He said that Jennings drank and that he acted in a wild manner. The District Attorney objected to the words "wild" and "insane" and they were stricken out. Asked if the prisoner was considered a bad man, the witness said that he was.

SEAMAN INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

While crossing Massachusetts avenue, near Hilton street, Roxbury, early today, Emile Beckman, thirty-six, of Jersey City, employed as a seaman on a lumber schooner anchored in South Bay, was struck and knocked down by an automobile driven by John F. Clark. He was placed in the machine and taken to the City Hospital, suffering from a fracture of the left ankle. The automobile was numbered 0601A.

Scientists Proclaim Health Is Shattered By Nervous Debility

All People Who Can Only Look on the Gloomy Side of Life Are Afflicted With Nervous Debility but Can Quickly Regain a Joyous and Cheerful Disposition by Using a New Tonic, Called Tona Vita, Which Quickly Can Take All Trouble Out of Any Unhappy Life.

The only happy people in the world are the optimists. The pessimist, or chronic grouch, makes others just as miserable as himself.

But the world should not judge these pessimists too hastily, for this is just as much an ailment as any organic disease.

A gloomy outlook on the world is a sure sign of nervous debility. The healthy mind and body cannot fail to appreciate the beauty of life and joy is just the reflection of radiant health. Tona Vita takes the frowns and furrows out of the most gloomy faces. Makes little petty troubles and wrongs of life disappear, and joy of good health rises paramount above all adversity. A smile is hidden in every drop of the new tonic. Many testify every day to the good results obtained from using Tona Vita.

A few of the symptoms that it has lately relieved are:—A sense of fullness after eating; a feeling of being over-strained, a tired-out and heavy feeling about the limbs; sick headache; night sweats; susceptibility to different ailments and a general feeling of being worn-out in health.

Tona Vita can be purchased at all drug stores in Boston.

STAR DISTANCE MEN TO COMPETE IN B. A. A. MARATHON

Oh! It's Great to Have a Home — By George McManus

SHRUBB COACH FOR HARVARD DISTANCE MEN

The news that the Harvard Athletic Association has concluded negotiations with "Alfie" Shrubb, the well-known English long-distance runner and coach of Harvard's championship cross-country team last Fall, to take charge of the Crimson distance runners this Spring has pleased the followers of the Crimson. This will relieve Coach "Pooch" Donovan of the responsibility in the half, mile and two-mile events, so that he may turn more attention to the men in the sprints and in the field events, now that the latter have been left uncared for by the death of "Bill" Quinn. Shrubb will report at once from Canada.

Shrubb has had remarkable success with the Harvard cross-country teams in the four years he has coached them, winning everything the team went into last season, and having the remarkable record of seeing all his ten men on the team finish in the Yale dual run before the first Eli runner came in sight. Shrubb will also have charge of the cross-country team next Fall.

Shrubb will have the brightest possible prospects in the three events that he will coach. For the past five years Harvard has won every place in the half, mile and two-mile events against Yale. This year Shrubb will have the entire championship cross-country team of last Fall to work with and some veterans besides. It is doubtful, however, if he will be able to find anyone to give John Paul Jones a stiff run in either the half or mile events in the dual meet between Harvard and Cornell this Spring.

In the half-mile the men with whom Shrubb will work in particular will be Huling, Koch, Capper, Stone, Banner, Bliss and Hawkes. In the mile and two-mile events here are: Lawless, Boyd, Copeland, Blackman, Carter, McClure, Warren, DeGonzalai, Tugman and a squad of over fifty other runners.

Pilgrims Play Toronto Today

Joe Kelley Has Strong Team

By A. H. C. MITCHELL.

MACON, Ga., March 27.—The entire Boston National delegation, headed by President Gaffney and Manager Stallings, arrived here late last night prepared to tackle today Joe Kelley's Toronto team which has been training here for some time. The stay in Atlanta did the Boston players no end of good. The weather was warm and no time was lost on account of rain.

The Boston team as it reached here, is far from a finished baseball organization, but they are in good physical condition, which means a lot. Stallings is experimenting all the time, constantly trying to teach his men how he wants the game played. Some of them seem slow to learn. Stallings' task is the hardest of any manager in the National League, while the team he is turning out for the pennant race of the National League is hardly as heavy with the stick as the squad that opened the season a year ago. It is a much better all-around ball club and it is believed will continue to improve.

McCONNELL AND GRAHAM WITH TORONTO.

Stallings is satisfied he can be depended upon to brace the outfit in several departments. The three days here are expected to give the Boston players good practice. Kelley's team of veterans won the International League championship last season.

Included in his roster are Amby McConnell, a former Red Sox, and "Peaches" Graham, a former Pilgrim. The Boston players are stopping at a new hotel recently opened.

The series at Atlanta ended 3 to 2 in favor of Boston.

The last game, yesterday afternoon, was cut short by a furious rain storm, ending 7 to 2 in favor of Atlanta. The score should have been much closer, but the Boston players pulled off some of these misplays so familiar to patrons of the South.

Coffey Lands K.O. Punch in Go with Rodel in Gotham

NEW YORK, March 27.—Jim Coffey, the Dublin giant, knocked out George Rodel, the African heavyweight champion, in the ninth round of a scheduled ten-round bout here at the Fairmount A. C. Although Rodel was knocked out, he was on his feet just as referee Billy Joh tolled off the first second.

The result was unexpected. Coffey went to his corner at the end of the eighth round cut and so badly damaged that it seemed that the Boer would score a decisive triumph in the next round. Coffey rushed in the ninth and met Rodel with a wicked right to the chin.

He followed it with a similar punch and Rodel dropped to the canvas. Coffey had won and won decisively, but in many respects it was a lucky win, for Rodel had him well beaten up to the time Coffey put over the winning wallop.

COLGATE IS VICTOR.

WEST POINT, March 27.—The Army lost its first game of the baseball season here being defeated by Colgate, 3 to 2. Colgate won out in the sixth by an error by Mossarrat, a base on balls and McLaughlin's line drive.

"Destroyer" Smith Yearning to Sink McCarty Cruiser

NEW YORK, March 27.—Gunboat Smith, the destroyer of the British cruiser Bombardier Wells, wishes to inquire if there's anything wrong with Luther McCarty or the latter's manager. The Gunboat person is greatly exercised for the simple reason that McCarty, or his manager, found out the dope that Gunboat was scared of Loth.

The latter signed up a few days ago to meet Jim Flynn in Philly and at the same time it was mentioned that Gunboat could have had the fight if he wanted it.

Gunboat, outside of swearing that Loth and his manager are flirting with the truth, begs to say that McCarty can have a battle two weeks after articles are signed.

Jim Buckley, manager of the "White Hope Destroyer," says that on several occasions he tried to get Loth to meet Gunboat, but the former declined.

Jim also declares that on never has a match prearranged or an opponent "planted." We don't know whether Joimes is alluding to Loth or not; that's for you to dope out.

DEMON AND ICEMAN BATTLE ON MAT

The meeting tonight between George Sandole, the Greek Demon, and Fri Mohl, the "Terrible Iceman," at the Grand Opera House may not produce some of the best wrestling ever seen in Boston, but for downright, rugged earnestness, the match promises to be exciting from start to finish. Both men are of the "get there" type, both are willing and powerful, and each has enough pepper to keep the fans on edge until one or the other goes down to defeat.

Wires Broken; No News Received from Sox at Southern Camp

No detailed news has reached Boston from the Red Sox camp at Hot Springs since yesterday. The telegraph wires have been broken by the fierce storms which are raging in the West and South. By relaying telephone and telegraph messages it was learned that it rained at Hot Springs yesterday and as a consequence there was probably no game played.

RITCHIE SURE HE WILL BEAT FREDDY WELSH

By JACK CONWAY

Willie Ritchie's announcement that he is perfectly willing to battle with Freddy Welsh, the English lightweight champion, in a twenty round contest on the Coast on the Fourth of July has caused him to gain favor with the fight "fans" again. The Frisco fad has not engaged in a ring conflict since he won the championship by defeating Ad Wolgast on a foul.

Billy Nolan's battler has been performing before the footlights, for which he has been receiving a fancy salary. He has ignored all of his challengers and as a consequence he has lost one supporter after another.

Freddy Welsh then informed us that he was going to invade this country and that nothing would please him better than a bout with Ritchie. The Coast youth was not a bit disturbed by the utterances of the Britton and came to the front and declared in a loud tone that he would fight Mr. Welsh on any of the seven days of the week and that he was confident that he would polish off the champion from across the seas. Bravo Willie! Brava!

So we will now place our hammer away in the glass case and save it for another day. We will not take any more cracks at Ritchie provided he keeps his word and gives the Englishman a match.

There is another young boxer with whom we would like to see Ritchie sign up. His name is Joe Rivers. The Metican wonder is a legitimate lightweight and can make 133 pounds, ringside, with ease and still be able to give a flashing exhibition.

Rivers is entitled to a meeting with the champion. He is one of the greatest boxers of his weight in the business. He is a fighter through and through and is also a skilful boxer. Personally I believe that Rivers is a better performer than Welsh. Billy Nolan probably also holds this view and this may be the reason why he has consented to permit his protege to engage in a pugilistic tussle with Welsh.

Ritchie and Welsh clashed on the Coast on November 30, 1911. Ad Wolgast was originally scheduled to meet the Britton, but was stricken with appendicitis on the very eve of the battle and Ritchie was substituted in his place.

To Start Work on the New Stadium at Yale in May

NEW HAVEN, March 27.—Plans for the construction of the proposed Yale Stadium were finally adopted at a meeting of the executive committee of twenty-one.

The bowl-shaped concrete structure proposed by Engineer C. A. Perry of this city has been accepted. This calls for a plant twenty-four feet below and twenty-six feet above the ground. Seating capacity for 50,000 will be provided. Specifications for the structure will be given out immediately and bids will be requested.

It is planned to commence work on the structure by May 1, although no hope is felt of its completion in time for football games next season.

Stock subscriptions for Stadium expenses amounting to $281,000 have been reported.

M'GOORTY HOPES FOR BOUT WITH FRANK KLAUS

By ED. W. SMITH

Eddy McGoorty and his manager have their eyes on a European trip. If Eddie is entirely successful in his battle with Jimmy Gibbs they intend to shape their plans for a New York match with Frank Klaus. If he can be induced to remain in America for a battle. If not they will chase the Gallagher to Paris and attempt to force the issue with him there.

The scheme at present is even more ambitious, as McGoorty would like to take a trip around the entire globe. Eddy insists the Denver fight weight, who is a free lance, is the best man in the division with a desire to see that period of the world.

McGoorty knows that he might be a strong card in Australia, because he whipped Dave Sime, the middle and light weight champion of Australia, in less than one round in a New York wrap last Fall. Natural the antipodeans would be anxious to see the man who could accomplish such a feat like that.

Eddie is an experienced traveller. Already he has made two trips to the other side of the Mother calling it over England and lived during the first excursion, but long after on his second campaign, he was so happened to pick out a lean period for the invasion. In Ireland Eddie was given the biggest lift of any stranger that ever came there, probably because he is a full fledged Irishman.

ENTRIES POUR IN FOR B. A. A. CLASSIC

WORLD STARS FOR MARATHON

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

The Boston Athletic Association is receiving daily the entries of the best long distance stars in th East for its great Marathon race that will take place on Patriots Day over the Ashland to Boston course. The best distance men in New England have sent in their signed entry blanks signifying that they will compete.

It has not been definitely decided whether Harry Smit will take part in the great race. Smith was a fine performer during the past indoor season over the ten-mile route, but he has taken a great look on himself, for he has competed all Winter in the turn and should really lay off instead of training for the long twenty-five-mile grind.

Louis Magu re, the North Attleboro youth who has done little work in competition since the Olympic games, will start in this race, as he believes Loaf Lo will be able to stand the long strain. He is running under the colors of the North Dorchester A A and is trained by Steve Ha ods in North Attleboro for the coming event. Maguire will be a valuable addition to the ranks of the North Dorchester A. A., as he is a fine runner over any distance up to ten miles.

It is decided of Joe Slavi, the B. A. representative in the 4 years race, will start in a year as Coach Ryder of the Back Bay Club intends to retain the veteran cross-country champion for the outdoor races of three miles. Up to the present time the B. A. A. has not entered any of its men in the race, with the exception of Silva, there is no member of the club who is able to run the twenty-five mile course.

The Canadians will make a strong effort to capture the premier honors and many of the star distance men of the Dominion will be entered. A large number of entries are sure to be received from Montreal and Toronto. The best men in both of those cities are training daily in other to be picked for the race.

Canadian Hockey Team Is Here for Clashes at Arena

Both the Pilgrim A. A. and the B. A. A. hockey teams will try their skill against the Winnipeg amateur champion team of Canada, at the Boston Arena this week, the former playing them Friday night, and the latter Saturday night.

The Winnipeg Hockey Club is holder of the Allan cup, emblematic of the highest honors in amateur hockey in the Dominion of Canada and has successfully defended it all season against all comers.

The Canadians will practice at the local rink today and tomorrow in order to acquaint themselves with the big surface and to get into trim for these two important games. The Canadian, who were in Boston last Saturday night to witness the professional game, express confidence of defeating both Boston teams easily, but they are ready to run up against the same thing that other Canadian teams have met here.

YALE BASEBALL NINE IS ON WAY HOME

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Yale's baseball team has started on its homeward journey, wet grounds preventing the game with Catholic University. Yale won three out of four games played and made a distinct impression. Its only defeat was by Pennsylvania Monday at American League Park, in eleven innings and was decided by a muff of an easy chance.

Meredith Winner in Taylor Memorial; Howe Is Second

NEW YORK, March 27.—"Ted" Meredith of the University of Pennsylvania, the sensation of the Stockholm Olympic games, gave further testimony of his prowess at the Smart Set A. C. games in the Forty-seventh Regiment Armory, when he won the John E. Taylor memorial quarter-mile from a capita, field in fifty-two seconds.

The other starters were Donnell B Young, Boston A. A.; W. R. Granger, Jr., Dartmouth College, H. Allman, National A. C., and Irving T. Howe, English High School, Boston.

Howe finished in second place, while Allman was third.

Howard P. Drew, Springfield High School, was the star performer in the special scratch race at seventy-five yards, which called out five starters and showed Drew the easiest of winners in 7 4-5s, with Frank Stephenson of the Tuxedos, the junior champion, second, and Martin, from Washington, finishing third.

ACME A. A. TO HOLD BIG 10-MILE RACE

The annual ten-mile open handicap cross-country run of the Acme A. A. will be held on the morning of Patriots' Day over a ten-mile course. The start will be at the club house, through Chestnut avenue to Centre street, to Beach street, to Washington street, to Ashland street, to Hyde Park avenue, to First Ateh, Forest Hills, to South street, to Fourth street, to Chestnut avenue and finish at the club house. There will be seven order prizes and one time prize. Entries close April 14, with Carl G. Lingerg, No. 29 Armstrong street, Jamaica Plain, Mass.

SILVERIO ASKS TO BE REINSTATED

Charles Silverio of Beverly, who won the national heavyweight championship of the Amateur Athletic Union last year, has written to the New England boxing championship committee asking if it is possible to reinstate him as an amateur so that he can compete in the New England championships, April 5. The championship committee will refer this application to the registration committee of the New England Association Amateur Athletic Union, but it is very doubtful if Silverio will be reinstated.

STUDENTS BOOM FUND FOR HARVARD GYM

The students' fund for the new Harvard Gymnasium is mounting each day, and by tomorrow evening it is expected that the $10,000 will be reached. 100 CRIMSON ATHLETES IN TRAINING

HARVARD MEN IN PENN GAMES

By J. O. JOHNSTONE.

Captain Cummings and Coach Donovan are already planning to have a delegation of stars at the Pennsylvania relay games next month. There are over 100 candidates training daily for positions and out of the large squad Harvard should be able to send a fairly well-balanced team of long-distance runners.

One of the big events will be the four-mile relay for the intercollegiate championship, and present prospects seem to give Harvard an excellent chance in the event. Besides the relay team, Coach Donovan intends to send two or three individual stars at Harvard for some of the special events.

Cable and Moffatt to Compete.

These will include Theodore Cable in the hammer-throwing event, while "Sandy" Moffat is slated for the high jump. Cable was only beaten in the 56-pound weight in the National championships by three New York police officers. He will probably compete in the broad jump also, for he has a record of more than twenty-three feet in this event.

There is some uncertainty as to what men will comprise the relay team, but it is quite certain that it will be composed of R. Carter, R. Boyd, F. W. Copeland, H. G. MacLure, H. P. Lowens and F. H. Backman.

This list includes three "H" men, Copeland, Boyd and Lawless. The other two are all point winners in the cross-country run, with Yale last Fall. Carter and MacLure finished within the first six as was expected at that time. T. W. Robinson, "H" man would likely be completely easy in the trials, but he will be kept out because of illness.

Cummings to Go Slowly.

Captain Cummings will not take the trip. He has decided that owing to the fact that he has been ill and is in no condition for the rough work of interclass affairs which will mark the training he will not take part at this time. Large Squad Is Out for Baseball Nine at Dean Academy

FRANKLIN, March 27.—Dean Academy has the largest baseball squad out this year that has ever represented the school, there being about sixty-five candidates. Practice started this week under the direction of Coach Daniel E. Sullivan. Four of last year's championship team, Captain Westcott, left field; Murray, third base; Crosby, shortstop, and Grobat, substitute catcher, are still in the game and around these four Coach Sullivan will endeavor to build another championship team.

The schedule:

April 12 Worcester South High at Franklin; April 19, Worcester Classical at Franklin; April 26 Comer Shop at Franklin; May 3, Georgetown Normal at Georgetown; May 10, Classical at Franklin; April 23 Milford College at Franklin; April 26 Worcester College at Franklin; May 1, Hopedale School at Lasell Seminary; May 2, Lowell High at Lowell; May 3, Classical at Franklin; May 9, Lowell Textile at Franklin; May 10, Lowell Textile at Lowell; May 17, Dean, 1913 at Franklin; May 24, Wesleyan Academy at Franklin; May 29, Dartmouth Club at Hanover; May 27, St. Anselm's College at Manchester; June 7, Harvard, 1916, at Franklin; June 7, Wilbur Seminary at Franklin.

JEFFRIES MAY NOT MAKE TRY TO COME BACK

By W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 27.—Now that Jim Jeffries has sounded out the critics and the public on the subject of a "come back," and has discovered that there is no overmeaning demand that he don his war paint again the chances are he will remain in retirement and away from the limelight.

Jeff's threatened return to the ring has subjected the one-time world's champion to a dent of criticism and some of the things said were notably unkind.

Even Packy McFarland, who as a rule refrains from remarks that are stinging and sarcastic, took his little fling at the alfalfa baron.

"Sure," said Packy, "if Jeffries decides to come back I'll fight him myself. Yes, and I'll beat him, too."

There was feeling there, of course, and in ex-lunatics Packy said that Jeff gave him a new deal while refereeing the Freddie Welsh-McFarland bout at Los Angeles.

The House on the Marsh

A CELEBRATED NOVEL BY FLORENCE WARDEN

PART I.

HOW do you think you'll be able to get on without me as well as I can without you?"

There was a pause. Then I heard Sarah burst into sobs and low, passionate cries for pity, for forgiveness.

"Why are you so hard? How can you have the heart to talk like that about my services, as if I was too old for anything but money bargains? That child, that Christie girl, that you put before me will never serve you like I've done."

"The services of a governess are not the same as those of a servant. That is enough about Miss Christie, Sarah."

I cried with shame and remorse as I stumbled up the turret stairs, shut myself in my room and lighted my candle. I did not feel a bit frightened now. I forgot even to turn the key in the lock this last adventure had swept away all remembrance of the previous one.

When at last I began to think collectedly of what I had heard, I felt no longer any doubt from what Sarah had said about the nature and extent of her services, that she was in reality the responsible guardian of Mrs. Rayner, and that, when she spoke of working against her master if he sent her away, she meant to punish far more than she had so long and so carefully kept secret—the fact that she had a wife tottering on the verge of lunacy.

It was Sarah, then, whom I had surprised in my room that evening! She had managed by some means to get access to my desk, and had seen the pendant, and, having made a grievance against me of the fact that I had received letters from a gentleman, had taken the letter and probably woven out of Mr. Rayner's own presence of having "picked it up," to prove to him by the direction in a handwriting which he knew, I was carrying on a correspondence with Mr. Laurence Ridge.

And I remembered that she had already taken the first move to Mr. Rayner. Well, if she had read that little note—for they were lying together in my desk—she must have seen that they were of a very innocent kind; but how was Mr. Rayner, who had not read them, to know that? I was annoyed and disgusted beyond measure. I could have forgiven her anything—even her meanness and playing spy while I looked at the moon which I were round my neck—but stealing my precious letters! I shed some more tears at the loss of it, not difficult even while trying to take the trouble to restore it. Boasted as it would be by having been read by her unkind eyes.

Then I went to bed, very tired and unhappy and at last I fell asleep, with my hands clasping the note which Sarah could not get at, which I wore in a case round my neck.

Awakened by Noise

Perhaps the excitement and agitation of the evening caused my sleep to be lighter than usual. At any rate, I was awakened by a very slight noise. Slight, but such that I thought it must have been the work of my nervous fancies, and my head fell to rest closing again as I waked. I suddenly became conscious that there was a light in the room not that of the rising sun.

Fully awake now and cool all over with this new fright, I saw by the flickering on the ceiling that the light must come from a candle from behind a screen. I saw that it was being carried round into the room, and then I closed my eyes and pretended to be asleep. My fingers were still clinging to the little case, but they were wet and clammy with horror. Was Sarah dead? What was she going to do now? She put back my letter? I did not dare look.

If by there listening so intently that I could hear, or fancy I heard, each soft step taken by the approaching light, and stopped, and from the effect from the flickering light through my closed eyelids I guessed that the candle was being raised to throw its light on my face. Still I had self-command enough to be quite still and imitate the long-drawn breathing of a sleeping person. But then the light seemed to stand still, for I felt the light coming nearer, and I heard the faint sound of a skirt brushing against the chairs, and a hand was laid very softly upon the bedclothes.

Still I did not move. I had formed a sort of plan in those deadly two minutes, which seemed like two hours, when the light was coming nearer and nearer to my face. The hand crept softly up, and slipped under the bed clothes close to my chin, till it touched my fingers clutching the little leathern case.

It tried to disengage them, but my clasp of my treasure was like grim death. Then the hand was softly withdrawn. I heard the drawing of a cork. I smelt the faint smell more strongly and a handkerchief wet with some sickening, suffocating stuff was thrown lightly over my face.

Then I started up with a shriek as loud and piercing as my lungs could give, tore the handkerchief from my face, and confronted Sarah, who drew back, her dark face livid with anger, but without uttering a sound. In her hand she held a little bottle. I tried with a spring to dash it from her grasp, but she was too quick for me, and with a step back against the screen, she held it out of my reach. Then the screen fell down with a loud crash! My attention was distracted from the woman to it for a moment, and in that moment she made another spring at my neck. But then there was a sound outside which had as many terrors for her as her own hard voice had for me.

Rayner to the Rescue

It was Mr. Rayner, calling sharply and sternly.

"Sarah, come out here!"

She started; then her face grew sullen and defiant, and she stood like a rock before me.

Again Mr. Rayner called.

"Sarah, do you hear me? Come here!"

And I saw a spell had been cast upon her which it was vain for her to fight against, she went slowly out of the room and down the stairs.

Then I heard a fall at the bottom of the stairs and a woman's cry, and immediately after a voice outside roused me.

"MISS CHRISTIE!"

It was Mr. Rayner calling softly through the door. I did not answer or move.

"Miss Christie, my dear child, are you there? Are you conscious? Are you ill?"

And I heard the handle of the door turn, but it was locked. I raised my head from its ground and said, in a weak, quivering voice:

"I am not ill, thank you, and I am quite conscious."

"But your voice is weak. Are you hurt?" I did that woman hurt you?" he asked anxiously.

"No, no, I am only frightened. I am not hurt. I will tell you all about it to-morrow, Mr. Rayner. I can't talk now."

I was getting hysterical again.

"She shall not come near you, child, I swear it! You are quite safe. I will lock the door at the bottom of those stairs and come and let you out myself in the morning," he said in a low voice.

Then came the sound I feared. Mr. Rayner unlock the door at the foot of the staircase when I had just opened mine, ready to go down to him. He waited for me, looked up anxiously, and seemed shocked at my appearance. I had noticed myself as I was dressing, how white and haggard I looked, and how dull and heavy my eyes were, and how black rings round them.

"You ought not to have got up at all. You should have stayed in bed and had your breakfast brought up to you."

Jane waited at table. Has Sarah, good eternity! My heart leaped at the thought. At breakfast Mr. Rayner said:

"I am going to propose a holiday for to-day. Both mistress and maid look very seedy, and I think a day' rest from lessons will do both good. My mother is not well, and I am sorry to say, for I have the penny bank accounts to do, and I want you to help me with them, Miss Christie, if you will be so kind as to spare us a couple of hours. I won't keep you longer."

I assented rather nervously. I should have a scene to go through with Mr. Rayner, and an announcement to make which would entail a lot of argument and persuasion and resistance, which I scarcely felt equal to, shaken as I was.

In an hour's time I shall expect you in the study, then."

After breakfast I went upstairs, where I found Jane doing my room. I caught her looking at me shyly as if I had gone up in interest in her eyes. She me, have been dissecting of the night's adventure I wanted to know what. She prepared to leave the room when I entered.

Sarah Leaving for Good

"Never mind, Jane, won't go. You have plenty outside I see. So you are doing two rooms this morning?"

"Yes, miss, I've got to get into the way of it, miss."

She gave a grasp, as if to continue, but stopped.

"Well?" said I, smiling, to encourage her to talk.

"You know Sarah's going away, Miss."

"Is she?" said I, unable to keep my face from brightening at the welcome words.

"Yes, Miss. Oh, there has been a rumpus, and no mistake! You just should have heard her go on! But she a going, I'm not sorry for one."

"What is she going away for?" said I.

"Don't you know, Miss?"

I felt quite ashy, but was evidently prepared to disbelieve me if I said "no."

"I can guess, but what reason did she give you?"

"Oh, it's all along of you, Miss! She burst into cook and me this morning, and said she wasn't going to stay in a house where there was such goings on. That was what she said, Miss."

"Well—well?"

"She said as how she went up to your room, hearing a noise, and then—as how she—"

"Go on."

"Then as how—Mr. Rayner had come up and—and wasn't best pleased to find her there—"

"Well?"

But Jane would not go on, but got very red, and fidgeted about with the cloth she was holding. And suddenly, as I watched the girl in wonder, the whole awful truth flashed upon me of the complexion that Sarah had given to the story.

I did not speak for a minute—I only felt a strange little fluttering pain that seemed to be round my heart—and then I said very quietly:

"I suppose she didn't tell you that she tried to steal something that I wear round my neck; that, when she found she was discovered she launched steeped in some drug over my face to make me unconscious that she might get it more easily? Jane, I am screaming that brought Mr. Rayner upstairs, and that he found me struggling with Sarah, who had got the locket and chain from me with her left hand, while with her right she was trying to force me to take a dose of something?"

Jane waited at table. Has Sarah, good eternity! My heart leaped at the thought. At breakfast Mr. Rayner said:

"I am going to propose a holiday for to-day. Both mistress and maid look very seedy, and I think a day' rest from lessons will do both good. My mother is not well, and I am sorry to say, for I have the penny bank accounts to do, and I want you to help

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

The Social Calendar

Society Happenings Tomorrow

Dance for the Prospect Union of Harvard, Copley-Plaza Hotel, evening.

Annual meeting and banquet of Yale Theological Seminary Alumni, Copley-Plaza Hotels, evening.

"Egyptian Princess," operetta, to be given by Choral Society of Radcliffe College.

Afternoon musicale at Copley-Plaza Hotel, given by the Misses Mixter.

Annual sale of Women's Charity Club, Hotel Brunswick, afternoon.

First Corps Cadets holds last dance of season at Armory.

Dartmouth Club smoker, in Copley Hall, evening.

Annual reunion of alumni of St. Johnsbury Academy, evening, at Twentieth Century Club.

A LARGE dance, for the benefit of the Prospect Union of Harvard, is one of the most interesting events scheduled to take place in society circles tomorrow. The ball is to be given at the Copley-Plaza. This affair is to be in the future an annual event. Among the committee who will receive will be Mrs. William H. Aspinwall, Mrs. Henry C. Everett, Mrs. Sewell H. Fessenden, Mrs. William A. Gaston, Mrs. Richard M. Saltonstall, Mrs. Walter Tufts, Mrs. Edwin S. Webster and Mrs. C. Minot Weld.

The annual meeting and banquet of Yale Theological Seminary Alumni will be held tomorrow evening at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, and fully 500 are expected to be present.

The annual ball of the Tudor associates will be held tomorrow night in South Boston at the Odd Fellows' Hall.

The "first night" of the operetta, "The Egyptian Princess," to be given by the Choral Society of Radcliffe College, falls tomorrow. The play is by Miss Virginia Tanner, a Radcliffe girl, and the scenic effects are said to be exceedingly rich and artistic.

The Misses Mixter will give an afternoon musicale and miniature doll's opera, presenting the play "Cinderella," tomorrow in the ballroom at the Copley-Plaza Hotel.

The annual sale of the Women's Charity Club is to take place at the Hotel Brunswick tomorrow afternoon.

The First Corps Cadets will hold what will probably be the last dance of this season at the armory tomorrow night.

The Dartmouth Club is to hold a smoker in Copley Hall tomorrow evening.

The St. Johnsbury Acad my alumni will have a reunion at the Twentieth Century Club tomorrow evening.

Irish Players at the Plymouth

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

The Irish Players turned their attention to the refined politics of Lennox Robinson's "Patriots" at the Plymouth last evening and gave a performance that was both human in its reflection of the plain people who inhabitated it and quaintly interesting in its finely drawn characterizations.

There was a good deal of banter and argument, to say nothing of a vast amount of small talk, in the early moments of the play. You were taken into the confidence of a revolutionary leader that had long since given up violence and was now engaged in peaceful agitation for a Republic and Irish Ireland. The remaining members of the league, which had been founded by James Nugent, had scotted down to resolutions and resolutions and swapped rifles and violence for literature and education. That is the way you found them when the news was received that James Nugent was to be pardoned after eighteen years in prison, where he had served time for the murder of one of his revolutionary traitors.

Returns from Prison.

It looked as if James would return home broken in spirit and feeble, and the league was prepared to find he was properly honored by being asked to address them on his life in prison. Then the play began. Methods may have changed since Nugent went to prison, and his brother members may have taken to quiet protest against English rule, but James Nugent was still a revolutionist of physical force type. His body was weak, but his spirit was strong.

The trifling fact that his wife and crippled daughter had prospered during his long sojorn in prison made no impression on him. He proceeded to provide him with means for a fresh outbreak against the government.

The dramatic power of Nugent's return was found in the loyalty of his daughter, who almost believed in him.

The play moved forward and the patriots were not now shooting up the constabulary. It was a time for return to the deluded Nugent, but he faced it with determination. One by one his friends deserted him until only one of the crippled daughter remained. Then he learned the terrible truth that his own neglect of her mother was responsible for her unhappy condition. That smelled the plans for a fresh outbreak of violence and sent him crushed and crumbling to the reform party of Sinn Fein.

"Rising of Moon" Given.

Miss Sara Allgood, as the wife, gave a finished performance, and Fred O'Donovan, as Nugent, played remarkably well. Arthur Sinclair and J. A. O'Rourke supplied an excellent comedy touch to the play, and Kathleen Drago played the crippled daughter with a plaintive note that made a small role impressive. The most delicious touch of homely humor was found in the Jim Powell of J. M. Kerrigan, who put real color into his interpretation of a humble janitor. His philosophy was with bearing at any time.

Besides "Patriots," Lady Gregory's "The Rising of the Moon" was given

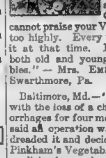
Two Women Tell How They Escaped the Surgeon's Knife by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Swarthmore, Penn. — "For fifteen years I suffered untold agony, and for one period of nearly two years I had hemorrhages and the doctors told me I would have to undergo an operation, but I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am in good health now. I am all over the Change of Life and cannot praise your Vegetable Compound too highly. Every woman should take it at that time. I am recommending it to both old and young for female troubles." — Mrs. EMILY SUMMERSGILL, Swarthmore, Pa.



Baltimore, Md.—"My troubles began with the loss of a child, and I had hemorrhages for four months. The doctor said an operation was necessary, but I dreaded it and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The medicine has made me a well woman and I feel strong and do my own work."—Mrs. J. R. PICKING, 1250 Sargent St., Baltimore, Md.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

Had Serious Lung Troubles—Now Well

Somehow there exists a vast amount of scepticism as to the possibility of curing Consumption. We state some but facts, and are sincere in what we assert.

If we were afflicted with Tuberculosis, we should go quickly where we could obtain Sykes Eckman's Alterative promptly and faithfully. The reason we about I do this and warrant the cure for using all Consumptives who take it, is that we have the reports of many recoveries, one of which follows:

1010 Susquehanna Ave., Phila., Pa.

Gentlemen: For two years I was afflicted with severe hemorrhage of the lungs. The matter settled nearly one hundred. Our family physician advised another climate, as to remain would prove only to be fatal. I, therefore, left and in February of 1902 I was taken with a severe attack of pneumonia. When I recovered sufficiently to walk about the house I was left with a frightful hacking cough, which no medicine I took seemed to relieve. I then was at this time, March, 1902, that I learned of your Alterative. I bought a bottle and in a short time my cough was gone and I was feeling like a new man. To make a long story short, I continued to use Alterative and I have never had to use another one since. I am at present in excellent health and feel that as long as I take Sykes Eckman's Alterative I have no fear of consumption, cancer, weak lungs, bad blood or the like.

Signed HOWARD L. RIOTZ

Sykes Eckman's Alterative is effective in Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, Throat and Lung Troubles. In admitting to a system, Does not contain poisons, opiates or habit forming drugs. Purifies the blood, strengthens, stimulates, tones, builds up and restores healthy organic action. Ask for booklet telling of recoveries. Sold by Sykes Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa., for additional evidence.

How I Cured My GREY HAIR

I Will Tell You Free How To Cure Yours by a Simple, Sure Harmless, Home Treatment. Age No Obstacle.

Don't Use Harmful Dyes That Make Your Hair Look Like a Painted Mop.

LET ME HELP YOU FREE.

When I was twenty-five years old I suddenly turned grey, and at twenty-eight looked like a woman of forty-five. I lost three good positions because my appearance made me look old. Like many others my elderly appearance proved an actual benefit until I was a physical wreck.

One day my godfather, a famous chemist, asked me to try a preparation he had perfected. I did so, and after a few days was surprised and delighted to find my hair becoming grey and darker in color. Very soon it was restored to the natural shade of my girlish days.

I am so delighted at my success that I am willing to send the secret, free to any man or woman whose hair is grey. Let me make it clear that it is quite different from the ordinary hair dye or tint which destroys the hair after a few applications, quite destroying its natural vitality and making it coarse and brittle. My secret will restore your hair to its original natural shade. I offer a reward of $500 to prove my statements.

If you want to renew your faded hair and look young, just write your name and address (stating whether Mr. or Lady or gentleman) and enclose a self-addressed stamp for reply. I will send you, free, details in a plain envelope. Address Mary T. Goldman, 2 Goldman Building, Goldman Yale 175 H, Goldman Building, Providence, R. I.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Beatrice Begins to See That Perhaps, After All, Keith Does Love Her.

BEATRICE MINOR sat motionless for some minutes after Helen Robbins had gone into the house. She was too much stunned by her friend's request to grasp it at first.

Then, little by little, she remembered the conversation that had preceded it. She had thanked Helen for all she had done for her. No material gift could ever repay her hostess for the trouble and nerve-strain of the past week.

The widow remembered that she had professed her longing to show her appreciation in any way within her power. And what had Helen asked? She could hardly believe the evidence of her senses. But, yes, Helen had asked her to be kind to Keith Lacy, her brother, and had added to that request the calm statement that Keith loved her—Beatrice Minor.

Now that Beatrice forced herself to recall the scenes of a fortnight ago, she remembered how often Keith had been at her house, and she recalled the quarrel between herself and Paul Maynard. How big and fine Paul had looked! She gave a little moan as she remembered the hard expression in his eyes as he left her and Lacy alone together.

Risked His Life

That was all over now, she reminded herself. Perhaps she would never see Maynard again. But she would see Keith. And he had risked his life to save her children from the flames. He had failed, and Paul had succeeded.

She felt a sudden throb of pity for the young fellow who had failed. All the glory belonged to the other man just because his strength was greater than Keith's. To be sure, his burns were worse than Keith's—but the Westerner had suffered also. And she had sent him no word. Yet he loved her—his sister said.

Then came a sudden revulsion of feeling. It was not fair for Helen to ask such a thing of her—a half sick woman, her guest. And yet Helen's brother had been injured because of his love for his sister's friend.

Beatrice sighed impatiently. She found herself reasoning around in circles. It was with relief that she saw a diversion in the shape of her children coming up the walk.

"Hello, mother!" they called. "Are you feeling all right?"

"All right!" she responded brightly. What darlings they were and how well they looked! But for Paul Maynard they might—she set her lips in a hard line and clenched her hands in the determination to keep back that one thought. And surely Keith had tried. Keith had tried. She said the words over and over to herself.

"What are you whispering, mother?" asked Jack, coming up on the veranda. "You look as if you were learning a lesson like I do at school."

"I am," said the mother gravely.

"An easy lesson?" asked Joan anxiously. "I don't like lessons."

He Was Handsome

"I hope it will be easy," replied Beatrice, gathering her little girl in her arms. "I don't like lessons either, darling. But little and big women have lots of them to learn."

"May I help with them?" asked a voice from the doorway. Turning, startled, Beatrice beheld Keith Lacy. He was pale and his right hand and arm were bandaged, while his hair, clipped close above his forehead, reminded her that it had been scorched. She rose quickly and ran forward.

"Oh, my dear boy!" she exclaimed, forgetful for the moment of the presence of her children. "How can I thank you—how can I ever thank you?"

He was handsomer than he used to be, she thought, and the sense of relief that swept over her as, in spite of herself, she contrasted his fresh face and clear eyes with the bandaged face and swollen lids of the man she had seen upstairs, made her more grateful to him than she had been.

"You can shake hands with me, anyway," he said, smiling brightly, more mindful than she of the scrutiny of the small boy and girl standing interestedly by. "I know that's bandaged," as she glanced at his right hand, "but the left's O. K., and nearer my heart, you know. That's probably one of the remarks that Adam made in the Garden of Eden, but its age makes it none the less true."

He held out his left hand, and she took it in her close clasp and looked up into his eyes.

"Mavver?" piped Jean's childish treble. "Why don't you kiss Mr. Lacy? He wouldn't mind."

"You bet he wouldn't!" exclaimed the man, throwing back his head with a boyish laugh, while Beatrice flushed crimson and dropped his hand.

A Few Burns

"Jean!" rejoined Jack severely. "Nice ladies don't kiss gentlemen unless they're going to get married to them."

"Run along, children!" exclaimed Beatrice. Then, remembering Lacy's recent invalidism—"Keith—I mean Mr. Lacy—please sit down! You're not strong enough to be standing up so long."

"You sit down, too," he said, as he obeyed her command. "I haven't really had anything the matter with me but a few burns. I suppose I could have come down stairs sooner, but I hated to come swathed up like a mummy. This is ugly enough as it is," he added, when he saw her glance at his left hand where an angry red mark still glared. "But, at least, the skin is intact. Does it disgust you?" he asked quickly, as a pained look crossed her face.

"Oh, no!" she exclaimed. "Only I was thinking how you must have suffered—and for me."

"I have comforted myself during these days of absence from you by remembering that the little suffering I have had has been for you," he said in a low voice. "Then," bitterly, "I have remembered, too, that, after all, it was of no use."

But she checked him. "At least," she said gently, "it showed me what you would do for me if you could."

"Do you suppose you can begin to know what I would do for you?" he asked with sudden earnestness. "Ah, Beatrice, if I could I would!——"

Her Helen, coming out on the veranda at that moment, made further protestation impossible.

Household Hints

All cooks do not understand the different effects produced by hard and soft water in cooking meat and vegetables. Peas and beans cooked in hard water, containing lime or gypsum, will not boil tender, because these substances harden vegetable casein. Many vegetables (as onions) boil nearly tasteless in soft water, because all the flavor is boiled out. The addition of salt often checks this, as in the case of onions, causing the vegetables to retain their peculiar flavoring principles besides such nutritious matter as might be lost in soft water. For extracting the juice of meat to make a broth or soup, soft water, unsalted, and cold at first, is the best, for it much more readily penetrates the tissue; but for boiling, where the juices should be retained, hard water, or soft water salted, is preferable; the meat should be put in while the water is boiling so as to seal the pores at once.

Household bread will keep fresh for considerably longer if, after it is cut, it is put with a well-fitting lit whenever it is received from the baker's—even made of tin will do if it is cool. An old-fashioned recipe for preventing loaves from becoming hard is very cold weather consists in covering them with a liberal sprinkling of flour and then inclosing each loaf in a paper bag. The necks of the bag should be tied round with string, when they should be hung on nails in a dry larder until required, the flour being then shaken off and the loaves wiped with a damp cloth before being placed in the oven for a few moments.

RESINOL STOPS SKIN TORMENTS

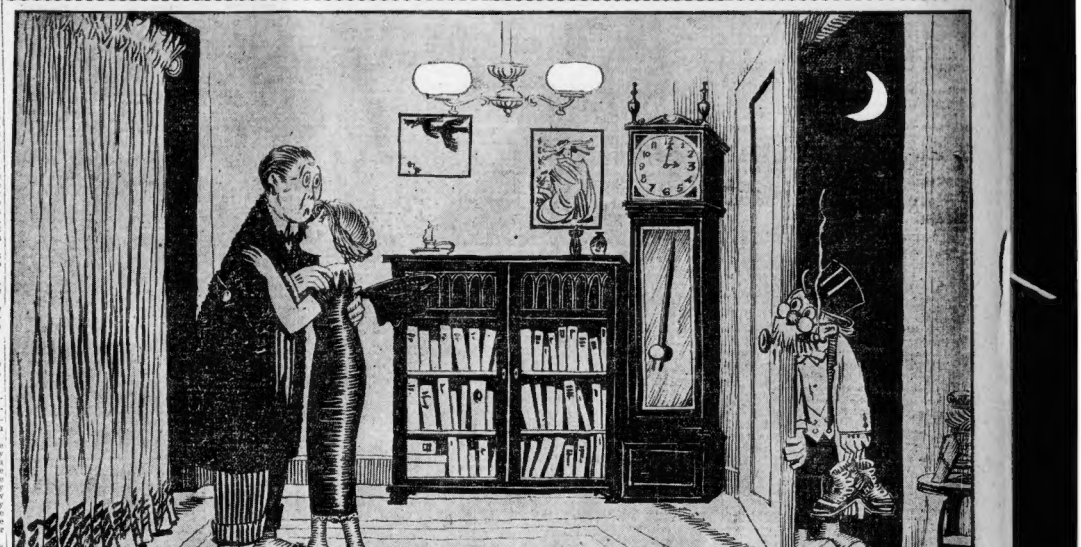
What Should They Say? If This Happened to You What Would You Say? Each "Has the Goods" on the Others



'Tis the witching hour of 3 a. m. HE is taking a fond and affectionate leave of HER—for the hundredth time. Father is caught in the act of making a grand sneak home.

What should each of the people in the picture say?

Talk it over with your friends and figure out what you would say if you were any one of the parties in such a position, but DO NOT send what you think to this paper. Discuss it among yourselves.

Of course, if father were an efficiency expert he might counter at daughter's best beau with something like this: "Young man, you made more than twenty-five useless movements in delivering that last farewell."

Candidate Son-in-law might protect himself by humming a bit of that old tune, "He never cared to wander and he never cared to roam, but always showed up at that fireside of his own real early in the morning."

And the girl might object to having the young man who has been paying attention to her focusing his mind on something else and murmur, "Are you thinking of asking me to name the day?"

There are countless expressions that would fit the case. Make up some of your own and try them on your friends.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

MARCH 5.—We leave for the north a day after tomorrow, and I think, in a way, we are glad. Tompkins wants to get back where he may see an occasional friend; Richards is worried because of Manette's wardrobe, and Manette is experiencing all a child's eagerness to show her new friend. Sarah Harriman, the toys that in a child's mind constitutes "home."

There was a basket filled with soft, fluffy gray kittens when she left, and she thinks they will still be kittens when she returns. I heard her tell Sarah Rae of the swing under the trees, of the frost-covered cakes the cook will make for their doll tea parties, and she is never tired guessing what the surprise can be which Mrs. Spencer wrote that she had for her.

Sarah Rae's greenish grey eyes open with wonder at enumeration of the joys that await her. Twice the age of her little hostess, she has become five again in anticipation of that which the migratory life her grandmother leads has denied her. She has known no home but that most dreary of homes—hotels—and the woman who has dragged her around in this fashion has never consulted the child's interest. The resort where she water has magical properties for restoring youth means more to her than a place that suits the youth in her care.

Sarah Rae is not the only neglected child in Manette's circle of friends. There is Alice Brown, whose forsaken look when the children make their plans haunt me. But to include her would mean continued intimacy with her mother, and that I know is not for the best.

A Man Unafraid

It is unfortunate that those with altruistic schemes for the welfare of children have no way of reaching the children of wealthy parents. It is easy to reach the poor and motherless, and often (and for this statement I would be burned at the stake if the mothers heard me) the child without a mother is more fortunate than the child around whose neck is hung that millstone called mother love.

March 6.—I am going home tomorrow. There, under Mrs. Spencer's wing, I will escape all mothers of marriageable daughters; I can rest from the pursuit of all widows; I can forget, in short, that I am a collection of money bags.

It was the feeling that I am so near shelter that made me reckless and darling this morning. I would hunt the widow, I thought; I would prove to her that I am a man unafraid. I would give myself the pleasure of an hour alone with her, something I had studiously avoided for the last ten days. I had no trouble in locating her. She was sitting alone in a remote corner of the wide veranda, and a vacant chair stood beside her. In this way the widow had often hunted me.

She looked particularly pretty all in white, I thought as I smoked and listened to her humorous remarks about the other guests at the hotel. My cigar was good, the morning was perfect, she had a charming voice and just enough wit to be entertaining, and I felt that the gods were good to me in giving me such a pleasing glimpse of danger before bidding it a final farewell. I was as sure of myself!

"When," asked Mrs. Brown, looking idly off toward the water, "will I see this Mrs. Spencer you said was coming down to look me over?"

"She is not coming."

"Why?" a little coolly.

"There is no occasion," I replied.

I had told her, Diary, that Mrs. Spencer was to select my wife, and was coming down to look her over. Now, with an assinine sense of security, I dared tell her there was no occasion! There was fully a moment's silence, then in the sweetest of tones, without any hint of the challenge, her words contained:

"You think not. But are you sure?"

"Quite sure," I replied, looking around for some sign of my carroty-headed guardian angel.

"Quite?" in tones soft and sweet.

"Yes, quite sure."

As she said nothing more, I ventured to look her square in the eyes, and that was my undoing. You can't understand, Diary, being nothing more than a collection of paper leaves with no blood in your veins, what it means to look right down into a woman's eyes and lose one's self there.

Such pretty eyes! And the look in them! I fairly gasped for breath! There was love in them and more! I felt as if I were floating away as softly and gently as if on the shadow of a cloud.

I felt as if I were going down, down, and that going down was extremely pleasant. I was drowning, and experienced all the pleasing sensations of a drowning man.

Like an Eternity

I remembered acutely how it would hurt to be pulled out of the water, and forced back to life, and I didn't want to be pulled out. I didn't want anything but the fulfillment of the promise in those eyes. Manette, the mercenary ambitions of the woman who invited me, her selfishness, my previous unhappy experiences with her sex, were all forgotten. I remembered nothing but that I was a man and that here within my grasp was a forgetfulness of every care the old world holds.

It seemed like an eternity that I gazed into her eyes, for men lose all count of time on such occasions, then she said again, more softly, more tenderly.

"Quite sure?"

"No," and my voice sounded strange and harsh to me and altogether unnecessary, for she understood without it; "not sure at all. I am sure of nothing but one thing."

"And that?" softly.

"I would like," I said, paying no heed to her question, "to have the clouds obscure the sun for just one moment."

"This isn't the only moment for you."

"I would like to kiss you," I said, "just many times, but just once. Just once as a woman like you should be kissed."

"Only once," with a sigh. "And why not?"

"Tonight," I said, "at eight, I will be waiting for you with a horse and buggy at the northeast corner of the veranda —tonight I will try to tell you"——I heard Manette's voice calling me now much I love you. Tonight I will find out just what you mean by that look in your eyes—I—Sweetheart"—Manette was coming running along the porch—"I love you!"

The look in her eyes never changed, and they never left mine, not even when Manette grasped my hand.

Then I felt as if I were pulled back to shore, and when my eyes left the widow to turn to the child climbing up my knee, I found, just as I anticipated, that resuscitation is most painful.

Up-to-Date Jokes

Binks—I had a most exciting time today.

Jinks—You don't say so!

Binks—Yes; I ran into the middle of Queen street, flung up both arms, and stopped a runaway cab horse.

Jinks—Pooh! that's nothing. D'ye know what I did the other day?

Binks—No; what was it?

Jinks—Why, I stepped to the edge of the pavement, held up my little finger, and stopped a taxi.

Counsel for the Defense (to his wife) Mrs. dear, I want you to look up everything that is movable in the house.

Wife—Why so?

Counsel—The thief who was acquitted this morning without a stain on his character, owing to my brilliant defense, is coming, I am told, this afternoon to thank me.

New System of Fat Reduction

Here's a new way for all fat people to laugh together at the old bugaboo—Obesity. The saying that "there is nothing new under the sun" does not now apply to fat people any more. Here is something new for them—a new sensation, a new pleasure, a new and graceful figure, easily found by anyone who is passing beyond the limits of slimness. Everyone has heard of the Marmola Prescription; that harmless combination of fat-defying elements discovered by one of our foremost physicians. Now, from the same high authority, there comes another idea—the idea of combining these same pure, harmless ingredients into a pleasant little tablet. Taken after eating and at bed-time, they help the stomach to dispose of all the fatty foods, converting them into compact, solid flesh, muscle and energy, without dieting or exercise. Marmola Prescription Tablets regulate the entire system—do for you what bodily exercise and self-denial cannot do, and the fat, once routed, is gone for good. You can prove all this at a trifling cost. Marmola Prescription Tablets are sold by all druggists or sent postpaid by the Marmola Co., Farmer Bldg., Detroit, Mich. A large case—sufficient to bring lasting results—is but 75c.

FORBES IN OPEN LETTER TO RAILROADS SHOWS HOW TO GET FAIR PLAY

By B. C. FORBES,
Business Editor of American.

Railroad and investment conditions call for this open letter to the president and directors of every railroad in the United States, and the trustees, directors and officers of all savings banks, insurance companies, trust companies, universities, hospitals and other eleemosynary institutions.

First—Gentlemen responsible for safeguarding railroad properties:

You declare that you are being so hampered by the Interstate Commerce Commission, by the federal government, by State Legislatures, by State Railroad and Public Service Commissions, by taxing authorities in general, and by labor combinations that you are powerless to properly protect the properties intrusted to your charge, and that conditions are drifting toward disaster.

You declare that various authorities are imposing burdens and exactions which you cannot continue to meet, and at the same time safeguard the billions of dollars committed to you for investment by individuals and institutions.

You declare that you are becoming gravely alarmed over the growing tendency to pass such costly and, in your judgment, unnecessary and ruinous legislation as Full Crew bills, and bills enforcing the hasty removal of all grade crossings.

Wage Advances.

You declare that your hands are being increased most generously and that you are compelled to advance wages unreasonably.

You declare that it is becoming extremely difficult to induce investors to provide the billion dollars (or more) necessary to supply adequate transportation facilities, and that you are obliged to pay unprecedented rates for all your capital requirements.

You declare that bitterly there has been a disquieting tendency to order one railroad to open up terminal facilities, conceived with foresight and constructed at great cost, to other railroads having to claim whatever upon these facilities.

You declare that the present Erdman act is an entirely unsuitable instrument for the settlement of labor disputes affecting large numbers of railroads, and that you will be at the mercy of labor combinations until a proper arbitration law is passed.

You declare that when it refused to grant your application for permission to increase freight rates the Interstate Commerce Commission based its decision on statistics and other information which were subsequently proved to be grossly inaccurate, misleading and prejudicial to your case.

Ignorance Shown.

Finally, you declare that the public has manifested ignorance of the true position of the railroads, and that were the whole facts known and rightly appreciated, there would be a demand that you be given a fuller measure of fairplay to the end that you may be allowed to maintain your properties in sound physical condition, provide the extensions called for by the growth of this young country, build up a fair surplus to meet emergencies—such as those now arising from flood, fire, tornado and acts of God throughout a large part of the Union—enable you to meet all interest charges on your bonded indebtedness, pay reasonable dividends to your stockholders and, last, but not least, pay living wages to your employes.

Your problem, you declare is: How to arouse the public to a rightful appreciation of the present railroad situation and the grave dangers that are threatened.

It is for the purpose of offering you a suggestion that this Open Letter is written.

One Possible Remedy.

Let the directors of each railroad in the country draw up a frank, truthful, lucid explanation of their road's position, pointing out harassments that ought to be removed and suggesting a feasible method of relief from threatened disaster. Let the president and every director personally sign the statement and mail it to every stockholder, bondholder and noteholder on their books, and, if need be, have it printed in full in the local newspapers.

There are perhaps four million security holders in this country, presumably persons of intelligence, of some standing and of average influence.

If proper statements are thus disseminated, a volume of reasonable, righteous public opinion would be created that neither federal nor State authorities could defy.

American citizens will not stand for anything but fair play.

And that is what you gentlemen declare you want.

Second. Gentlemen Responsible for Safeguarding Beneficiaries of Savings Banks, Insurance Companies, Trust Companies, Universities, Hospitals and Other Eleemosynary Institutions.

Another Way to Aid.

You are dependent for the whole or part of your income upon your investments, billions of which are in railroad stocks and bonds.

You have seen, to your discomfort and dismay, the value of your security holding stock lower and lower.

You must be prepared—if what railroad managers allege be true—to witness further very serious shrinkage in your investments—and, pitimately, in your income.

You cannot adequately meet your responsibilities if your income be gravely impaired.

You are not less interested than the railroad managers themselves in obtaining fair play for the railroads.

If you believe that the demands of the railroads are just—if you can honorably subscribe to statements prepared and signed by them—would it not be your duty to the millions of citizens dependent upon you to co-operate with the railroads by obtaining supplies of these statements and mailing them to your depositors, your beneficiaries, your clients or others whose interests are under your guardianship.

If there are such reasons and if the railroads say there are, are you do less than aid in steering clear of them?

GEORGE W. PERKINS, EX-SENATOR FROM SOMERVILLE, DEAD

Former Senator George W. Perkins died early today at his home, No. 149 Perkins street, East Somerville, from a complication of diseases. He had been confined to his home since last October, when he was forced to give up the office of chairman of the Somerville board of Assessors, to which he was appointed in 1908 by Mayor Charles A. Grimmons.

Mr. Perkins was born in Tamworth, N. H., July 1, 1842, and went to Somerville forty-one years ago. He was a member of the House of Representatives in 1891 and 1892, and of the Senate in 1893 and 1894.

Mr. Perkins was past master of Soley Lodge, A. F. and A. M.; member of the Somerville Royal Arch Chapter, Cyprus Council Select Masters, Demolay Commandery, Knights Templars, Royal Arcanum, A. O. U. W. He leaves a widow and two brothers.

GETS SIX MONTHS TO THINK OVER JOKE

A practical joke resulted today in a sentence of six months at the House of Correction for William A. Armstrong, thirty, of New York. Armstrong told Judge Fallon of the South Boston court that he was joking when he attempted to pass a forged check for $35. The judge announced that he would give the joker time to think over the error of his ways. Armstrong tendered the check in payment for goods which he picked out in the wholesale liquor store of Henry A. Corcoran at No. 14 West Third street. Patrolman DeVoss entered the store and arrested him just as Mr. Corcoran was informing Armstrong that he could not accept a check.

DIES AFTER DOCTOR O. K.'S HIS HEALTH

After passing an examination for an insurance policy, Louis Dembosky, a wealthy Salem real estate broker dropped dead today in that city. He had been examined by Dr. George Blair, who pronounced the man a good risk. Mr. Dembosky, who was fifty-eight, left the doctor's office and started for his home at No. 9 Gardner street. While walking along Lafayette street he dropped dead from heart failure.

BELLEVUE WORKERS HAVE DANCE TONIGHT

The fifth annual ball of the employes of the Hotel Bellevue will take place tonight at the Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics Building. From 8 to 9 there will be a concert, the talent being furnished by the local theatres.

The grand march will start at 9:30 and one of the features will be the six Scotch pipers in kilts that are to lead it. Prominent city officials have accepted invitations and will attend, and a big night is promised to every one in attendance.

In Sunday's AMERICAN

Stock Prices; Financial News

Stock prices ranged lower this morning, the weather and flood news having a depressive effect. In Boston, New Haven receded 1½ during the first hour, and coppers did not advance much in response to the substantial rise in London warrants. Some stocks made early gains and lost them later.

In New York by 11 o'clock Reading, Steel, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania and Amalgamated were fractionally lower. American Can was off more than a point.

Towards the close the London market was firm, with American railway issues hesitant.

Floods Affect New York Market.

Stories of immense storm and flood damage from the Middle West affected the stock market today, giving rise to a belief that railroads and corporations will have to liquidate securities in order to rehabilitate physical stock and meet relief requirements. The list was irregular. Among the losses were Steel common ⅝, Union Pacific ⅝, Southern Pacific ½, Reading ½, Pennsylvania ¼, Missouri Pacific ¾, Erie ½, St. Paul ¼, Canadian Pacific ½, American Smelting ⅜, and American Can ⅛. Amalgamated gained ⅝, while other advances included Goldfield ½, General Electric ¾, Norfolk & Western ½ and Southern Railway ¾. The Curb was irregular.

Copper Metal Up in London.

There was less buoyancy in the London stock market in early hours, but sentiment continued cheerful. It was lessened somewhat by Bulgarian denials of peace negotiations, notwithstanding the capture of Adrianople by the Balkan allies. Consols displayed firmness. American stocks averaged well in tone, but Illinois Central faltered on reports of flood disasters.

There was a big rise in copper metal quotations in the standard warrants market in London at the opening, spot advancing £1 and futures 12s.

The Drop in Butte Central.

The following was received at the Boston AMERICAN office:

"Vice-President Freeman I. Davison of the Butte Central Copper Company says the net three-point break in the price yesterday was due to the selling out of loans made when the stock was above 90.

"Panicky feeling was influenced by a story coming from Butte that the company's local depository, the State Savings Bank, had declined to advance $6,500 on the company's payroll, confirmation of which had not been received, owing to Western floods and wires down. The company has sent funds covering the payroll, which will straighten out the situation at the Butte end, aggravated by delayed telegraphic connection."

Financial News in Brief.

European buying of Canadian Pacific led to the belief that Berlin is repurchasing some of the stock it recently sold.

It is stated in New York that the belief prevails that the Southern Pacific will be allowed to keep the Central Pacific, or at least until the dissolution of the two companies is complete.

The 1913 edition of Floyd W. Mundy's "The Earning Power of Railroads" has just been issued, making the thirteenth year this established year book has appeared to fill the requirements of investors who are seeking the vital facts bearing the values back of securities of all the railroads of the United States, Canada and Mexico.

It is said that Edward T. Platt will retire as vice-president and general manager of the United States Express Company. He has been actively associated with the company for twenty-five years. He has refused to discuss his resignation or the question of his successor. He will remain a director.

An investigation of the statements made by the American Smelters Security Company and the minority interests of the Federal Mining & Smelting Company, concerning the latter concern, is being made by the New York Stock Exchange.

Canadian Pacific has awarded construction contracts totalling $5,800,000.

Associated Oil Company has declared a dividend of 1¼ per cent., with the recommendation that half yearly payments be hereafter made at that rate.

Galveston, Houston & Henderson Railroad's issue of $2,000,000 first mortgage 5 per cent. bonds will be postponed until arrangements can be made to satisfy objections of the Texas Railroad Commission. Maturing bonds which were to have been provided for by the delayed issue will be taken up at par.

The fourth annual report of Phelps, Dodge & Co., gives total earnings of $10,005,538, as compared with $7,283,508 in 1911. After allowing for dividends and the transfer of $1,500,000 to reserve against stocks owned, there was surplus of $2,685,185.

The Bank of England's minimum rate of discount remained unchanged at 5 per cent. today. The proportion of the bank's reserve to liabilities is 39.70 per cent., against 40.45 per cent. last week and 43⅛ per cent. last year.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share.

The New York sub-treasury gained $88,000 from the banks yesterday, and since Friday has gained $2,147,000.

THEODORA GERARD UNDER THE KNIFE

NEW YORK, March 27.—Theodora Gerard, who after a career as a chorus girl in Broadway productions became a celebrity on the London, Paris and St. Petersburg stages, and recently was named as co-respondent in the divorce suit of Mrs. Linda Lee Thomas against Edward B. Thomas, the one-time banker, has undergone an operation in St. Petersburg for appendicitis, and when the letters left Russia her condition was critical.

HERE'S A NEW LAW ON EASTER HATS

AUSTIN, Tex., March 27.—Because his view was obstructed by the hats of women when he attended Easter church services, Senator H. W. Brelsford introduced a bill in the Legislature making it unlawful for any female to wear in church or any public gathering any hat or head dress having a crown or any ornament exceeding two inches in height or a brim more than four inches wide.

THE LORD'S PRAYER IN ARABIC FIRST

PHILADELPHIA, March 27.—That the Lord's Prayer was originally written in Arabic verse was the assertion by Professor C. C. Torrey of Yale at the session of the American Oriental Society at the University of Pennsylvania. To prove this statement, Professor Torrey recited a portion of the Arabic version.

BUILD UP NEW ENGLAND

The Industrial Bureau of the New England Railroad Lines invites the co-operation of merchants, manufacturers and business men for the upbuilding of New England.

During the past 23 months, 80 manufacturing firms, representing an investment of $3,000,000 have been established in New England as the direct result of the work of the New England Lines "Industrial Bureau" in co-operation with chambers of commerce, boards of trade and business associations in New England.

The New England Lines represent more than $700,000,000 invested in New England transportation. These lines can be prosperous only as New England is prosperous.

When you hear of anyone seeking location for an industry, don't hesitate to promptly notify the Industrial Bureau, South Station, Boston, that we may co-operate to bring the business into New England.

You Press the Button, We Co-operate.

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN BOSTON MARCH 27, 1913

The New Haven's Opportunity

Under the Plan Outlined by the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce, the New England Railroads Are to ABANDON Their Trolley-Line Ambitions, Leave the Building of Resort Hotels to Hotel-Men, and Devote All Their Great Skill and Talent to the RAILROADS—A Great and a GOOD Plan, Which Spells Peace and Happiness to the People and the Industries of New England.

Asked by members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce to study the question of separating the Boston & Maine and the New Haven Railroads, and then to make the results of their study the subject of a special meeting of the Chamber, the Board of Directors of that great institution have made public a report which merits the careful consideration of not only EVERY BUSINESS MAN but EVERY CITIZEN of northern New England.

Answering the main question, and after nearly three months of careful study, the Directors of the Chamber of Commerce recommend first that the Chamber "take the position that at the present time there should be NO LEGISLATION WHICH WOULD TERMINATE THE EXISTING RELATIONS, and NO LEGISLATION DIRECTED TOWARDS CONSOLIDATION, OR THE GRANTING OF A LEASE, as between the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Boston & Maine Railroads."

The Directors of the Chamber, it is plain to be seen in the report they have placed before forty-six hundred members, see signs of an "AWAKENED MANAGEMENT" in the railroad business of New England. They would give this awakened railroad management a FAIR TRIAL, a reasonable time within which to ascertain the degree of efficiency which can be attained.

The AMERICAN commends the splendid spirit of this report of the Directors to their fellow members in the Chamber.

And the AMERICAN finds it easy to take this position on the report of the Directors to the Chamber because that report, substantially and in every line, is a JUSTIFICATION AND AN ENDORSEMENT OF THE POSITION TAKEN BY THIS NEWSPAPER in all the long years of New England's fight against the unthinking greed of what was intended to be—but never will be—a monopoly of ALL THE AVENUES OF TRANSPORTATION IN THESE SIX STATES.

The reader of the AMERICAN who reads the report and recommendations of the Chamber of Commerce directors will find something familiar there in the declaration that "it is UNWISE TO PERMIT OUR STEAM RAILROADS TO PURCHASE TROLLEY COMPANIES or acquire additional interest in other classes or property NOT NECESSARY TO THE OPERATION OF RAILROADS."

The reader of the AMERICAN who reads also this report of the Chamber of Commerce directors will find something familiar, again, in the proposition that "railroad skill should be UTILIZED IN THE IMPROVEMENT OF RAILROAD SERVICE, and not in further experiment with OTHER CLASSES OF TRANSPORTATION."

And so with the recommendation of new and independent steamship lines, to Galveston, to the Pacific Coast by way of the Panama Canal, and to other points; so with the strong insistence by the Chamber directorate that New England be given a more proportional representation on the directorate and on the executive committee of the New Haven corporation; the constant reader of the AMERICAN meets old and familiar friends in ALMOST THEIR CUSTOMARY DRESS.

Line by line this newspaper of the people of New England finds cause to rejoice in this patriotic finding by the able directorate of Boston's great Chamber of Commerce. Those who have borne the brunt of the early fighting against special privilege in New England may well feel that they have been fighting the good fight when they read in this splendid document, for example:

> We recommend that your Directors be authorized to state to the members of the Massachusetts Legislature that in the opinion of the Chamber it is advisable to enlarge the authority and increase the resources of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission, as previously set forth in this report.
>
> We believe that the present Legislature should increase the power and scope of the Massachusetts Railroad Commission in substantial accordance with the bill now under consideration by the Committee on Railroads. This Commission should be given power equal to that of efficient commissions in other states and annual appropriations of money which will make it possible for them to secure necessary expert assistance and to establish a more efficient organization.

Meanwhile the VITAL note of the Chamber report is an insistence on ADEQUATE SERVICE FOR THE TRAVELLING AND SHIPPING PUBLIC.

A wise, if somewhat belated, understanding which ought to have, and the AMERICAN believes will have, the ENDORSEMENT OF THE MEN AND WOMEN OF NEW ENGLAND.

The QUESTION OF ELECTRIFICATION on the Boston & Maine can WAIT.

The project of a TUNNEL UNDER BOSTON from the South Station to the North Station can WAIT.

MANY things can wait—among them the buying or building of resort hotels by railroad companies—but adequate service for the shops and mills and people of New England MUST WAIT NO LONGER.

It appears to be agreed that there will be NO RAILROAD LEGISLATION at the State House this year EXCEPT in the direction of increased power for the Railroad Commission.

Meanwhile everybody concerned is to SHAKE HANDS. The slogan of the six States is to be "BOOST, BROTHER, BOOST!"

The AMERICAN has ALWAYS believed—and STILL BELIEVES—that New England's commercial and industrial salvation must come through COMPETITION IN TRANSPORTATION. Many among the directors of the Chamber of Commerce, we learn from this report, hold the SAME VIEW. These directors, nevertheless, are willing to give the railroad monopoly an opportunity to demonstrate its efficiency.

Let the good work begin and go on!

To the implied understanding between the big men of the railroads and the leading men of the Chamber of Commerce the AMERICAN pledges FULL AND HEARTY SUPPORT.

This newspaper—it need hardly be said AGAIN—has NEVER held malice for or grudge against either the New Haven or the Boston & Maine Railroad.

It HAS been necessary, for the public good in New England, that things should be said, and SAID FEARLESSLY, of corporate greed and corporate blindness. The AMERICAN has tried to say these things and to say them at the right time.

With the gentlemen of the railroads giving their time and their talents to the BUSINESS OF RAILROADING, and with the gentlemen of New England industry and commerce free to give THEIR time to factories and counting rooms—under the plan outlined by the Chamber of Commerce—it is likely that there will be little left to criticise in New England transportation.

And in this new era, of understanding, of brotherhood, of co-operation, this newspaper aims to take A LEADING PART.

If the Chamber of Commerce Directors have not been misled, if the railroad men were correctly understood at the conference of March 18, New England's railroad troubles are LARGELY OVER.

HELLO HENRY WHATS GOOD TO DAY?
EVERY THING IS FRESH! ON THE BILL
BETTER BRING ME SOME EGGS
HOW WILL YOU HAVE 'EM COOKED
3 EGGS ONE FRIED ON THE TOP ONE FRIED ON THE BOTTOM AND THE OTHER FRIED IN THE MIDDLE!
KITCHEN
THE EGG MARKET
WELL! CAN I HELP IT? ITS THE WAY HE ORDERED IT
SAY! NO MORE EGG JOKES
SAY WHAT DID YOU ORDER.
I ORDERED HASH

OH, POP, CAN'T I HAVE A PET DINOSAURUS TOO?
CERTAINLY NOT.
SHUT UP! HOW CAN I READ WHEN YOU'RE MAKING SO MUCH NOISE?
STOP THAT, ROVER!
HELP!
GET OFF, ROVER!
WHY DOESN'T THE PROFESSOR GET RID OF IT?
AW, HE CAN'T GIVE IT AWAY!

"What's the disturbance about?"

"Well, you see, Professor Skinclothes has a young dinosaurus he's made a pet of, and it's so affectionate that it wants to get up on his lap all the time!"

Telescope Has Told Us More About Moon Than We Know About Earth's Surface

Lunar South Pole Is Dotted with Huge Mountains, Ragged and Clear Cut, With No Air to Sweep Over Them and No Water to Wear Them Down

By GARRETT P. SERVISS

WE know more about the South Pole of the moon than we do about the South Pole of the earth. One reason why we know more about it is because we are so far away from it. Let me explain this paradox.

If we stood on the moon, in the neighborhood of its South Pole, we should find ourselves surrounded by steep and rugged mountains from 15,000 to 25,000 feet high, and vast crater-like holes twenty miles across, and three or four miles in depth. Of course in such a situation we could see nothing but our immediate surroundings, and if we attempted to clamber over them to get wider views, we should be confronted by insurmountable obstacles.

But worst of all, on the moon we should find no air to breathe, no water to drink, no clouds to screen off the blinding sunshine by day, and no vaporous blanket to afford protection at night against the awful cold of empty space, hundreds of degrees below zero!

Evidently there could be no polar or other exploration amid such circumstances. But, situated as we are on the earth, 240,000 miles from the moon, we can avoid all its inconveniences, and yet get effectively near its South Pole by the aid of the telescope.

This shows us the whole polar region in a single view, and all its features are before us at a glance. If we could get a similar view of the Antarctic continent the entire scene of the adventures of Shackleton, Amundsen and Scott would lie plain before us.

The telescope is a genie more powerful than any in the Arabian Nights; it seizes the moon for us and practically puts it in our laps.

With a magnifying power of 500 diameters the moon is brought within 480 miles of the observer's eye; if the power is 1,000 the apparent distance is 240 miles; and with a power of 2,000 the distance becomes only 120 miles. Now, let us see what this means.

Suppose you take an ordinary terrestrial globe, on which the geographic features of the earth are plainly represented—the seas and lands, the mountains and plains, the locations of the great cities, etc. Let the globe be one foot in diameter, a usual size. Take it on your knees.

When it is one foot from your eyes you see its features on the same scale as you see those of the moon with a telescope magnifying only about 120 diameters, and a small telescope will easily magnify that much.

Then bring the globe within a distance of about six inches and its features will appear on the same scale as those of the moon when magnified 240 diameters. In order to make the same comparison when the magnifying power of the telescope becomes a thousand or two thousand, you must bring the globe so near that distinct vision is destroyed, and the only way to see its features clearly is to use a magnifying glass.

This shows us how it is that, thanks to the telescope, we really know more about the surface of the moon, as a whole, than we do about the surface of the earth. Of course we do not see the minute details, but, on the other hand, we see the broad relations of the moon's geographic features better than we can represent those of the earth on an artificial globe.

Because of the absence of air and water there is little weathering action on the lunar rocks, and accordingly the huge, sharp peaks stand up in all their precipitousness for age after age, whereas the mountains of the earth are being continually worn down.

Perhaps the feature of the lunar landscapes which would appear most wonderful to us is the immense number of great volcano-like craters that pit the surface. One of these in the neighborhood of the South Pole is called Newton, and it is so deep and so steep-walled that the sunlight can never reach the bottom of it.

Owing to the absence of air there is no diffused light in the lunar sky. The heavens are as black as ink in full daylight.

The stars all shine, with dazzling brilliance in the very presence of the sun, and when the latter rises, at the end of the lunar night of two weeks' duration, it is preceded by no dawn.
